By Shirley Povich.

F. D. Roosevelt, a husky right-hander, who was signed to a $75,000 contract last November after carrying his case to the people, will shift his aim from the Supreme Court at 3 p. m. today and take up again his annual role as the highest-paid pitcher in the land.

One-Pitch Roosevelt, who requires only a single delivery to strike out the pre-game suspense of opening day, will be handed a glossy white, virgin baseball at Griffith Stadium, and with a toss toward the diamond will send the nine young men of Washington into action against the nine young men of the Philadelphia Athletics.

That the ball which Right-Hander Roosevelt pitches will never feel the impact of a hitter's bat or the groove of a fielder's glove, but will be preserved as a memento of the occasion by the athlete lucky enough to grab it in the scramble which always ensues, is quite beside the point.

Roosevelt Blessing Awaited.

The point is that the ace right-hander of the White House staff will have lent his Presidential blessing to another big-league pennant race. The only remaining preliminary will be the umpire-in-chief's commanding shout of "Play Ball!" and the tumult and shouting will begin.

Before 30,000 fans who for months have been clamoring for tickets, Bucky Harris' Nats and the venerable Connie Mack's Athletics will take the field. With reserved seats long since sold out, Griffith Stadium officials this morning will toss a sop to the disappointed fans in the form of 16,000 bleacher seats which will go on sale at 11 o'clock.

With an eye toward the weather man's prediction of possible showers, Griffith Stadium officials announced last night that the field has been protected by a tarpaulin and, barring rain at game time, the contest will be staged on schedule.

If it follows custom, and it has invariably on opening day, Congress will suddenly discover that it lacks a quorum and adjourn to its reserved seats at Griffith Stadium. The brass hats of Washington's legislative life will be out in force to join in the general assault on the peanuts and pop.

Precisely at 2:55 p. m. Managers Harris and Mack will be summoned to the banner-bedecked Presidential box after the White House cavalcade of limousines bearing the President's official party and Secret Service men have nosed into the park. To the tune of "Hail to the Chief," rendered by the Army Band, the Presidential party will be seated.

Photographers Wary.

Warmly, Mr. Roosevelt will greet the two managers with an especial affection for the veteran Mack, one of his baseball favorites. Then, warning photographers to duck, he will make his annual pitch and retire from competition for the season.

An athlete who has not taken time out from his warm-up duties even during the impressive ceremonies around the Presidential box, will then stride out to the pitcher's mound and unleash the first bona-fide pitch of the 1937 season.

He will be toothy Joe Cascarella, Manager Harris' pitching selection for the Nats' 1937 debut. Facing him as the first Philadelphia batting threat will be Outfielder Lou Finney, the Athletics' lead-off man.

It will be Cascarella vs. Kelley in what bears all the earmarks of a pitching battle. The swarthy Italian to whom Manager Harris has given the honor of the opening-day assignment has been a phenomenally effective hurler in the Nats' spring campaign, and the chunky Harry Kelley is the ace of Connie Mack's staff. Both are right-handers.

Late last night the presence of Cecil Travis in the Nats' line-up was still doubtful. Trainer Mike Martin hesitated to assure Manager Harris that Travis' spiked knee, suffered on Saturday, would have

Martin Studies General Strike In G. M. Plants

Plan Again Discussed as Oshawa Negotiations Collapse.

Labor Developments.

Union leaders discussed a new General Motors walkout in all United States plants to force settlement of the Canadian strike.

A unionization drive in Ford plants was expected to be discussed at a United Automobile Workers meeting here today.

By the Associated Press.

Oshawa, Ont., April 18.—A new General Motors walk-out in all United States plants to try to force settlement of the strike in the General Motors of Canada plant here again was discussed today by union leaders.

This discussion followed the collapse yesterday of Premier Mitchell Hepburn's second major effort to end the Canadian strike in his office.

Reliable sources said leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America now consider the company has broken two agreements with the union.

These leaders assert the February agreement that ended the General Motors sit-down in Michigan also applied to the Canadian plant. The company, they maintain, broke its pledges when its Canadian officials refused to draw up an agreemnet with the union to cover the Oshawa workers.

Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., also is known to feel that the company broke an agreement to end the Oshawa strike he said he reached with General Motors officials in Detroit last Thursday.

On the other hand General Motors maintains that the February agreement did not cover Canadian workers.

While they talked of a strike in United States plants, union leaders nevertheless attempted to head off a mass meeting Mayor Alex Hall has said he would call tomorrow night to discuss what he calls failure of United States workers to back up the Canadian strikers.

When the United States sympathy walkout did not materialize, Mayor Hall said he would give the international union until tomorrow to make good its threat. If General Motors plants across the line were not closed by Monday, he said, he would urge the strikers here to forget about the international union and go back to work.

The strike, involving 3,700 employes, will go into its twelfth day tomorrow. So far it has been wholly peaceful.

Five thousand Daughters of the American Revolution, arriving in the Capitol over the week-end, looked forward eagerly last night to the colorful ceremonies which will open the forty-sixth annual Continental Congress tonight in Constitution Hall.

Grace Adams East, trumpeter of the Congress, will sound the assembly call at 8:30 o'clock, signaling the entrance march. Then in a brilliant processional, in which pages will display the flags of every State, Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, and other national officers will move to the stage of the packed hall of delegates. A minute later Mrs. Becker will call the Congress to order.

Preliminary to tonight's grand opening were a series of memorial rites yesterday. One thousand delegates who reached Washington Saturday and yesterday morning met in Continental Memorial Hall in the afternoon for annual services in honor of Daughters who had died since the 1936 Congress.

Memorial Tribute Paid.

There were 2,409 of these deceased members Mrs. Becker announced. Among them were Mrs. Anna Spencer Semmes Bryan, of Memphis, Tenn., an honorary vice president general, and Miss Sarah Pool, of Georgia, who, born in the early 1840's, was a daughter of a soldier of the Revolutionary War. Individual tributes were paid these women in the "Hour of Remembrance."

Mrs. E. Thomas Boyd, of Denver, Colo., the D. A. R. chaplain general, led the prayers for the deceased. She was in charge of arrangements for the entire memorial.

In addition to Mrs. Becker, speakers of the service included Mrs. Alvin Valentine Lane, honorary vice president general, and Mrs. Julian McCurry, of Athens, Ga., chairman of the Real Daughters' Committee. Music was furnished by the Alden Singers, directed by Jewell Downs, and Katherine Riggs, harpist.

After the service in Memorial Continental Hall, Mrs. Becker led a pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery, where she placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and to Mount Vernon, where she placed wreaths on the tombs of George and Martha Washington. This pilgrimage, in which several hundred delegates took part, was in charge of Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, honorary chairman, who was the last of the Washington family to be born at Mount Vernon, and Mrs. Charles H. Carroll, chairman.

Sunshine Greets Delegates.

The warm sunshine, and the burst of blooms, not only at the Tidal Basin where the cherry blossoms were at the height of their beauty, but also in other parks throughout the city, drew many of the delegates and their friends into sightseeing trips. D. A. R headquarters pointed out that delegates and their friends

Byrd Pictures Mounting Costs In Government

By Russell Smith.

Taking new Brookings Institution studies as his text, Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, warned last night 'greatly increased fixed charges" of government may be expected "for a long time."

With this statement went the implication that reduction in emergency activities of the Government offers the principal avenue to administrative economies. Pay roll costs, he added, significantly, are shown in the studies to be "the largest item of administrative expense."

Byrd's disclosure of the Brookings figure came as Congress awaited President Roosevelt's delayed message on relief appropriations for the 1938 fiscal year and as reports circulated among its members that the President will recommend a more drastic reduction than the most conservative had expected.

Aid Controversy Flares.

These reports were to the effect that the President had decided to request appropriation of much less than the $1,500,000,000 he had been expected to ask. This sum had drawn the fire of the "liberal" House bloc, led by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, the Council of Mayors and Governors of six populous States, headed by Gov. Lehman, of New York, an intimate of Mr. Roosevelt's.

Over the week-end the relief controversy was pointed by dispute between Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Commissioner of Labor Statistics Isador Lubin. The former charged the Administration had overestimated the number of unemployed by perhaps as much as 5,000,000 and Lubin retored that "if Senator Vandenberg's calculations were correct, 4,000,000 more people would be at work in the United States than there were employed at the peak of the 1929 boom."

In the course of his discussion of the Brookings figures, which have

By the Associated Press.

London, April 18.—Commanders of warships of four nations received instructions tonight for taking up a patrol of the Spanish coast tomorrow at midnight, the time set for inaugurating an international plan to isolate the civil war.

Land observers also will take up their posts at that hour, bringing to a climax months of "hands off Spain" negotiations.

Informed persons expressed hopes the scheme would prove a forerunner of a new era of international peace efforts.

About 60 warships from the navies of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy will begin a check of the entire coast line of Spain. The land observers, to be stationed at the French, Portuguese and Gibraltar-Spanish borders, will total about 500.

"Neither land nor sea observers will be authorized to halt men or shipping bound for Spain, but will notify all governments responsible if any breaches (of the neutrality pact) occur," an informed source said.

Governments pledged to obey the spirit and letter of the nonintervention agreement to keep men and war supplies out of Spain are expected to mete out punishment to their nationals violating the pact.

Countries not members of the agreement, such as the United Statse, will be informed if their citizens or merchantmen are found guilty of volunteering or running munitions to Spain. Nonintervention countries already have passed legislation prohibiting transportation of men and munitions to Spain.

Rothschild House To Be Stripped by Auctioneer Today

London, April 18 (AP).—Treasures of the famous House of Rothschild, noted for its vital role in the financial history of Europe, will go under the auctioneer's hammer tomorrow while thousands of radio listeners hear the bidding.

The British Broadcasting Co. decided to broadcast the proceedings that will strip the furnishings from one of the most famous mansions in London.

Art experts plan to throng the great marble staircase when bidding begins for the pictures, carvings, furniture and tapestries valued at many thousands of pounds sterling.

Victor Rothschild, son of the first Lord Rothschild's second son, is present owner of the great residence, but since his major interest is science, he prefers to live near Cambridge University, and is disposing of the family treasurers.

G-Man Shot By 2 Bandits Loses Battle For His Life

F. B. I. Agent Dies After Operation and Blood Transfusions

Gangsters' Loot Found in Hotel

Death Penalty Will Be Demanded for Kansas Postoffice Crime.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., April 18.—The bullets of two New York gunmen he sought to trap two days ago claimed the life of a young Federal agent just as his fellow G-men were clamping an $11,000 web of evidence about the spectacular gangsters today.

W. W. Baker, 27, the agent, died last night at midnight in a hospital here of four bullet wounds he suffered in his first major assignment. An emergency operation and at least two blood transfusions were futile.

The death of the agent was shielded in such secrecy by the Federal Bureau of Investigation that it did not become publicly known until the body was removed to a funeral home. Baker's father, of Yuma, Ariz., was understood to be in seclusion here.

In nearby Kansas City, Federal agents held Alfred Power and Robert Suhay, gangsters accused of an $18,000 Katonah, N. Y., bank robbery, to fact what United States Attorney S. S. Alexander said would be a prompt indictment for murder. The prosecutor indicated the indictment would be sought before a June grand jury although there was a possibility of a special grand jury being called earlier.

First Degree Charges.

Warrants charging first degree murder will be issued for Suhay and Power tomorrow, Alexander said. He indicated they might be taken before a United States commissioner in either Kansas City, Kans., or Leavenworth, location of a Federal prison.

Baker was the tenth Federal agent killed in the line of duty since 1925. George Barrett, Kentucky moonshiner, was the first man executed under a new law providing the death penalty for the slaying of Federal agents. He was hanged in Indianapolis, March 24, 1936, for the slaying of Nelson B. Klein in August, 1935.

The two gangsters blasted their way out of a trap Friday in Topeka's downtown postoffice. As Baker was cut down by bullets the return fire of his fellow agents wounded Suhay in the left wrist.

Homer Sylvester, 5 foot 4 inch Nebraska sheriff, and his deputy seized the gangsters without a shot Friday night after the New Yorkers lost their way through the streets of Plattsmouth, Nebr., a town of 3,700.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I., said in Washington that the gunmen had admitted the Topeka shooting. As Hoover explained it, Suhay approached Baker from the rear after Baker had surprised Power and both Power and Suhay then began shooting and running from the Topeka postoffice. Agent W. E. Farland and a third G-man had laid the trap with Baker.

Sheriff Sylvester recovered $4,800 from the clothing of the gangsters and yesterday $6,954 was found where it had been hidden in a Kansas City Hotel by the gunmen. The G-men immediately began to trace the $11,754 as a part of the $18,000 New York bank robbery loot.

Found Money in Hotel.

The $6,954 was, in effect, a Kansas physician's rejected fee for treating the wounded gangster in the flight of the gunmen from Topeka.

Dwight Brantley, Kansas City agent in charge of the F. B. I., said Power and Suhay gave a "Kansas doctor" the keys to the hotel room in which they told him there "was a lot of money and he could have it."

In Coronation Fashion Rivalry

Barbara Hutton, Kent Duchess Vie in Dress-Spending Spree

Five and Ten Cent Store Heiress and Royal Family Member Flood Paris Shops With Orders in War for Coronation Fashion Honors.

By the United Press.

Paris, April 18.—Countess Kurt von Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton of the five-and-ten-cent store millions, and the Duchess of Kent appeared tonight to have entered into a costly contest for the title of the best-dressed woman at King George VI's coronation.

Their spending sprees at Paris couturiers have reached a total of $25,000, and women of the international set—they pay $500 for a dress without a flicker of an eyelast—are talking about the biggest "fashion battle" in years.

The countess and the duchess apparently are unaware of the "battle"—or, at least, they prefer to ignore it—but one hears women talking about it in almost every style salon.

Duchess Spends $15,000.

The dark-haired duchess, who ranks without dispute as the best-dressed member of the British royal family, has spent about $15,000 on her costumes for the cornation festivities. The countess paid $10,000 for 30 costumes, and she's still buying.

Countess Haugwitz, who returned recently from Ciaro with her husband and their year-old son, has regained her slim figure and has taken a renewed interest in extravagant clothes.

The fittings for her new wardrobe have kept her and her baby son in Paris while the count skis in Switzerland. She made a flying trip to the Alps to join him for a few days between fittings.

Friends said that the count and countess were devoted to each other. They termed "utterly ridiculous" rumors that the heiress—first married to the late Prince Alexis Mdivani—would divorce the count and marry a young and wealthy Belgian baron.

Most of the countess' new clothes are for evening wear. One is a frothy gown of white lace tulle with white flowers at the waist and a full skirt in graduating flounces of lace. Another is of pale blue crepe—the exact color of her eyes—with low-cut decollette back and front.

Orders Blue Tulle Gown.

She has ordered a navy blue tulle gown splattered with silver stars and outlined in sequins with matching cape and star-sprinkled transparent veil covering the face and head.

The Duchess of Kent's chief purchase was her coronation gown, from the house of Capt. Molyneux, in gold brocade embroidered in gold and silver sequins and jeweled cabochons.

The gown is made with short sleeves, is fitted at the waist and has a long, tight skirt ending in a large train.

By the United Press.

New York, April 18.—Julia Nussenbaum, 25, beautiful dancer and violinist, died in Roosevelt Hospital tonight from a blow delivered with a hammer by a mysterious assailant in a rehearsal hall.

Her stage name was Tania Lebova, and she had gone to the rehearsal hall—in the building occupied by Radio Station WOV—to prepare for a night-club engagement in Toronto.

The girl was struck on the head with a hammer, which was found in the hall near where she was lying unconscious under a pile of gray draperies. Surgeons operated, but had small hope of saving Miss Nussenbaum's life. She suffered a compound skull fracture.

Police sought a man who was seen to enter the rehearsal hall around 10 a. m. today. He departed at 10:30, according to an elevator man. Miss Nussenbaum entered the studio at 10:15 a. m. She was found in midafternoon by Moya Engles, who had rented the same rehearsal hall for the afternoon.

Miss Nussenbaum was said to be the daughter of Nathan Nussenbaum, of Bridgeport, Conn. Relatives there said that four weeks ago she broke her engagement to a New York man.

Physicians said Miss Nussenbaum had not been criminally attacked.

Doctors said the blow was struck by someone of unusual strength. A claw hammer, with which the wound was inflicted, was found nearby.

Railroad travel records were set and a 41-year-old heat record equaled yesterday as the Capital peeled off its coat and later its vest. There was one prostration as the thermometer reached 93 degrees.

A feature of the heat was the rapidity of the rise. At 6 a. m., the thermometer reading was 48 degrees, and at 4:20 p. m., 10½ hours later, it stood at 93 degrees, a jump of 45 degrees.

Largest influx of railroad visitors in history was recorded by the Pennsylvania Railroad, with Union Station jammed, and the regular New York-Washington excursion scheduled to 14 trains, each carrying close to 1,000 passengers.

A full hour was needed to tour the Cherry Blossom area, although automobile traffic was not so heavy as last Sunday. Arteries leading into Washington were crowded with cars from distant States. Eighth Precinct police noted there were more Pennsylvania cars on Connecticut avenue at times yesterday than District cars.

More than 170,000 tourists visited the cherry blossoms, according to police estimate. A count showed 28,700 automobiles circled the Tidal Basin, some 10,000 less than last Sunday. About 50,000 pedestrians visited the blossoms, police said.

The chill weather which greeted Washington's greatest crowds last week changed completely yesterday as warm winds from the South lifted the mercury in a steady rise.

The 93 degrees didn't break an all-time record but it equaled the mark for the day, established on April 19, 1896, 41 years ago.

Mercury Climbs.

The fastest rise was registered between 11 and 12 noon, when a leap from 72 degrees to 81 was noted at the Weather Bureau. From noon onward the mercury crept steadily upward without pause, and as it did so electric fans were turned on, coats came off, then vests, and finally hats. Visitors and citizens trudged glaring sidewalks with moist brows usually seen only in midsummer.

The Weather Bureau saw an end of the heat today in its forecast of "cooler" with showers early in the day. Tomorrow is expected to be cloudy.

A near-record crowd at the Zoo was reported by park police. It was estimated 48,000 strolled under trees there to look at the animals and enjoy the blooming of spring.

Hotel space was impossible to get. The Washington Tourist Camp turned away hundreds. Rooming house accommodations became scarce by noon yesterday, as the Washington Housing Corporation exhausted its list and called on the American Automobile Association and other agencies for supplementary lists.

Buses Delayed Slightly.

Bus line officials said some slight delays were caused by heavy traffic, especially on the Washington boulevard to Baltimore. They added no extra buses were needed to furnish adequate service, but said all buses were full. Laurel police stated traffic was considerably lighter than last week.

Alan B. Smith, general passenger agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, said yesterday's rail crowds surpassed in numbers the peak crowd in the line's history, which was in 1922 when the Holy Name Society convened here. Largest delegation—some 14,000—journeyed from New York.

Baltimore & Ohio officials enjoyed their biggest business last week when it was their turn to run a Sunday excursion, the two roads dividing alternate Sundays between them for excursions to New York. About 1,700 visitors came in on the B. & O. from Philadelphia, where its excursion for the day originated.

Cherry blossoms, turned white after a week, were again the magnet which drew throngs toward the Tidal Basin yesterday.

One child was reported overcome by heat at the Zoo. He was revived and released. It was the only prostration reported.

Boy, Kept Alive Year as Steel Beads Reopened Lye-Seared Throat, Dies of Simple Operation

All the skill and ingenuity of medical science, which kept 2-year-old Bobby Fowler alive for a year after he swallowed lye, ended in death for the child yesterday and defeat for surgeons, when complete victory seemed in sight.

In May, 1936, the child crawled into an old icebox, found a can of lye and, thinking it food, swallowed some. The caustic scorched his throat and resulted in its swelling shut so that he was unable to eat.

With death from starvation facing the child, surgeons at Providence Hospital, with the aid of Dr. James A. Flynn, began a series of difficult and unusual operations. First step was to open the baby's stomach and feed him through a rubber tube.

Second step was the stringing of a linen thread from his mouth to his stomach on which a series of steel beads was to be passed, gradually expanding the esophagus, a treatment devised by a French surgeon.

Bobby, after many trials, swallowed the thread and doctors with an instrument illuminated by a tiny electric bulb found the end of it in the baby's stomach. From then on steel beads were pulled through the closed throat, each bead slightly larger than the last, over a period of six months.

Smallest bead was one-fortieth of an inch in diameter. Largest and last bead was 1½ inches in diameter. The little boy's throat was completely cured about six months ago, but his physical condition was so low and his resistance so weak it was feared a major operation, which was necessary to close the hole in the stomach, would endanger his life. It was decided to give him a few months of rest in which to regain his strength.

But the passing months failed to improve Bobby's general health. His mother was able to feed him through his mouth again, at her home at 319 B street southeast, but he remained weak. Two weeks ago physicians determined to close the aperture in the stomach and he was returned to Providence Hospital. They believed he was growing no better, that the aperture could not be left open indefinitely, and that they would risk an operation.

Saturday the boy was lifted from his hospital bed, placed on what he called "a go-cart" and wheeled into the operating room.

Leaders in Parley Here as A. F. L. Chiefs Push C. I. O. Feud.

Strategy aimed at organization of workers in Henry Ford's industrial empire will be the theme of today's conference here of United Automobile Workers' leaders with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, it was revealed yesterday.

The meeting will be held as American Federation of Labor leaders, also in conference here today, prepare to push their bitter feud with the C. I. O. to a conclusion, reportedly by calling a federation convention at Nashville, Tenn., to ratify explusion of C. I. O. unions.

A recommendation for expulsion of the rebel unions may be voted during the three-day session of the executive council starting today.

The auto workers' special executive board meeting, Homer Martin, president of the union, told the Associated Press in Detroit, will be to discuss "organization plans." "We will have Henry Ford on the run by Monday," he said.

May File Charges.

Charges against the Ford company may be filed with the National Labor Relations Board following today's meeting here, he also indicated.

Ford, meanwhile, was proposing an intensive production campaign, it was revealed in Detroit by an unnamed official of the Ford companies, the Associated Press also said.

Declaring Ford will demonstrate "some real competition in quantity production," this official announced the auto magnate has approved construction in Detroit of a 2,500,000-cubic-foot gas holder "as high as an 18-story building."

Ford recently purchased a $5,000,000 turbo-generator to increase the potential power of the great Rouge plant 50 per cent—also for production purposes.

Martin denied rumors the executive board is expected to investigate reports of a factional dispute within U. A. W. A. ranks or that disciplining of "radical elements" in the union was contemplated.

Frowns on Some Sit-Ins.

Martin, when it took 12 hours of talking to get Chrysler strikers to leave the plants, charged then Communist elements were attempting to block the Lansing truce. He has disapproved also sit-down strikes in General Motors plants in violation of the pact settling G. M. strike issues.

Some labor observers here believe the meeting of U. A. W. A. officers and 18 board members from various parts of the country was called here because Lewis desires to keep in closer touch with the union's organizational program.

Martin, in Detroit, commented the gathering was scheduled for Washington "so that we will not be interrupted by other business, which always occurs when we meet in Detroit."

Although A. F. of L. officials denied a convention had been called at Nashville, as was reported Saturday at Tulsa by G. Ed Warren, president of the Oklahoma Federation of Labor, they remained noncommittal as to steps to be taken to deal with the insurgent unions.

It was generally believed some action will be forthcoming during the three-day meeting.

The council's agenda also calls for discussion of sit-down strikes and plans for an intensive membership drive in the wake of Supreme Court decisions upholding the Wagner labor act and rights of labor to demand recognition for unions and collective bargaining with employers.

Miss Perkins Calls Talks.

The labor questions also will receive the attention of a labor-management conference on Tuesday, called by Secretary Perkins. She said she hoped the discussions would develop a national program for settlement of labor disputes which might not come under the Wagner act.

In Flint yesterday evidence of dissension in the U. A. W. A. was seen as union workers completed two-day balloting to nominate candidates for an election of local officers next Sunday, the Associated Press said.

Some sources said the primary result, which probably will not be announced until today or tomorrow, might indicate the attitude of workers there on a reported dispute between Martin and Robert Travis, chief U. A. W. A. organizer in Flint.

With smoother operations in prospect, the automotive industry expects to produce 130,000 new cars and trucks this week. The wane of strikes promised steadier pay for employes. Statisticians estimated that in the past five months automobile workers lost between $65,000,000 and $70,000,000 in wages.

In unrelated industries, the labor picture was more tranquil also. Only four Detroit plants remain in the possession of strikers, three of them laundries and the other a tobacco-processing factory.

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP).—Clark Gable will be the first witness Tuesday in the trial of Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, 47-year-old English woman, and Jack L. Smith, private detective, who are accused of using the mails in an attempt to defraud the screen star hero.

United States Attorney Jack Powell said tonight he would call Gable to dispute Mrs. Norton's contention he is the father of her 14-year-old daughter, Gwendoline.

Sen. Hitchcock Loves Prairies, Convinced Roosevelt Is Right

Tall South Dakotan Likely to Minimize His Own Talents; Backs New Deal '100 Per Cent;' Favors Supreme Court Change.

With a liking for the East—that's new to him—and a love for the praries and Black Hills of South Dakota—that are home to him—Senator Herbert E. Hitchcock shares with these emotions one abiding and outstanding conviction:

"Roosevelt is right."

You may talk with him a long time, joining subjects, such as the dust and insect pests that blow and crawl over the Dakotas, the droughts that make Dakota farming a gamble, the hardships the Democratic Party once knew in Dakota, the fine hunting afforded by the Black Hills—but more definite than his feelings on any of these is his conviction that "Roosevelt is right."

Hitchcock, in appearance, wouldn't fit the popular picture of what he is, a prairie State lawyer-farmer. He fits, rather, the popular notion of how a suave Eastern bond salesman should look. He is tall, straight as a shingle, has a congenial, inviting face and wears sporty clothes that fit like a tailor's model.

Puts Guests at Ease.

It is doubtful if anyone ever was ill at east around Hitchcock. When a visitor enters his office, Hitchcock fairly bounds from his seat, grabs the visitor's hand warmly, shows him to a chair—in other words, acts exactly like a person who might have something to sell. Of course, he has nothing at all to sell—not even himself. That's what's so striking in his character—he won't try to make you think he's a great and good man. He will answer questions, give a lot of his time to it, will talk a lot of the great and good men whom he knows, but when it comes to himself there is a distinct self-effacement that really is nothing less than a jewel.

"Interesting things about me?" he says; "yes, I have had interesting experiences . . . Any man who has lived as long as I has had interesting experiences . . . but there's nothing, especially, that occurs to me right now . . . I wasn't elected to this office . . . Was appointed, so there isn't anything in the way of a political fight to relate . . . Yes, I certainly am behind the Administration—100 per cent . . . And I'm for remodeling the Supreme Court . . . I say this as a lawyer" . . .

Began Politics Early.

His career, briefly traced, is this: Born, Maquoketa, Iowa, August 22, 1867; attended high schools at Anamosa, Iowa, and San Jose, Calif.; attended business college at Davenport, Iowa, the State College at Ames, Iowa, and the College of Law in Chicago; moved to Mitchell, S. Dak., in 1884; admitted to the bar in 1896; president Mitchell school board for ten years, 1924-1934; prior to this he was State's attorney for four years, 1902-1906; State senator, 1909, 1911 and 1929; was State Democratic chairman for four years; was party secretary and executive committeeman; was appointed to the United States Senate December 29, 1936, to fill the unexpired term of Peter Norbeck, ending January 3, 1939.

Hitchcock refers to all of this background in the same unromantic way as it is set forth in the Congressional Directory. He warms up to the backgrounds of other people, but about himself says only: "Any man who has lived as long as I has had interesting experiences, of course." And then he will say that hunting is his chief diversion, but he won't lay claims to any big kills.

New Brain Disease From Milk Reported

St. Louis, Mo., April 18 (AP).—A brain disease caused by bacteria in raw milk was reported today to the American College of Physicians on the eve of its twenty-first annual meeting.

Dr. E. Perry McCullagh and Dr. H. M. Clodfelter, of the Cleveland clinic, declared they had traced the cause of the tissue-destroying brain inflammation known as encephalitis to the bacteria "Brucella Abortus" which causes contagious abortion in cattle.

This organism is transmissible to human beings in milk, they declared, and is known to cause undulant fever, a disease marked by varying fever, chills, headaches, and pains in the muscles and joints.

Farmer Finishes 40th Day of Fast

Stooping Oak, Tenn., April 18 (AP). Reduced from 136 to 109 pounds, Jackson Whitlow observed today the fortieth day of a self-imposed fast which, he said, will be broken only "when the Lord tells me to quit."

The farmer-trapper, 45, said he received a "call" to fast through a study of religious songs.

Despite the fact he said he had taken no food, he was still able to perform chores about his humble cabin. His wife said she was ready to serve him food at any time he believed the fast could be broken.

By the Associated Press.

Secret research by which the Navy hopes to develop a nearly "noiseless navy" to escape enemy listeners was disclosed yesterday by Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary, and son of the late inventor.

The engineering experiment station at Annapolis, Edison said, is now engaged in a study designed to "reduce the noise level of various machinery units on board ship." The propeller beat and other noises of a ship now are picked up at long distances by "submarine ears"—microphones which record sound waves transmitted through water.

"High noise levels," Edison said, "are objectionable from both the standpoint of tactical and personnel efficiency. Design modifications and the application of the most suitable sound-absorbing materials have proven most effective in noise reduction."

Lieut. R. L. Dennison, of the experiment station, in a report prepared for the United States Naval Institute, said that sound-proof mounting could materially reduce noise.

Torpedoes Are Danger.

Aside from the nervous strain on men, which has a detrimental effect on their health and efficiency, Dennison said noise might bring serious consequences under war conditions.

"Recent developments in listening devices," he reported, "may make it possible for a submarine to track and successfully fire torpedoes at a surface ship without exposing her periscope. It then becomes important for a surface ship to limit the noise emitted. It is obvious that a noisy submarine is herself more in danger of detection than a relatively quiet one.

"It is a common experience during war games or maneuvers, when under way at night without lights," Dennison said, "that contacts with destroyers running even at moderate speed are first made by detecting blower noise before the destroyer herself becomes visible. This exposure of our destroyers during a night enagagement might well be of serious consequence."

Langley-Wright Plane Controversy Held 'Superfluous'

By the Associated Press.

A Smithsonian Institution official said yesterday that any effort to change institution records concerning the historical value of Samuel Langley's first airplane was "superfluous."

The controversy over whether the Wright brothers or Langley built the first successful heavier-than-air craft was renewed Saturday in New York. Clarence Chamberlain, transatlantic flier, set out on a national tour with a petition directed to Smithsonian regents, requesting a change in records.

Chamberlain said Orville Wright would not request that his airplane be brought back to the United States from the British Museum in London unless Smithsonian records concerning the Langley plane were changed.

Dr. C. G. Abbott, institution secretary, said yesterday that the label on the Langley plane had been changed in 1928 after conferences with Wright. The present label on the Langley plane reads only:

"Langley aerodrome. The original Samuel Pierpont Langley flying machine of 1903, restored."

Peru Honors Army Ace On Return From Hop

Lima, Peru, April 18 (AP).—A national hero's welcome was given to Capt. Armando Revoredo Iglesias, the Peruvian army's foremost aviator, when he returned to Lima by air today from his 2,000-mile nonstop flight to Buenos Aires.

At least 10,000 persons were at the airport to greet him, and scenes recalling Col. Charles Lindbergh's return to New York in 1927 were enacted as he drove through throngs lining the three-mile route from the airfield to the President's palace.

Capt. Iglesias made his flight to Buenos Aires March 27. He flew back by easy stages.

Jittery Dance Steps Tabooed This Year

Indianapolis, April 18 (AP).—Smart ballroom dancers will avoid the Charleston, the Finale, the Indiana and other such jittery hop-steps this season as they would partners with toe-smashing tendencies.

That was a tip given by Pearl Allen, president of the Chicago Association of Dancing Masters, as 150 instructors from six States came here for the latest training in terpsichore technique.

Louis Stockman, leading authority on ballroom dancing, backed Allen with the assertion that "hops will be danced only by the most cheap persons." Allen emphasized that "smooth, quiet dancing is here to stay for a long time to come."

Architects Ask Quick Passage Of Housing Bill

Letter to Senator Black Stresses Need for Centralized Control.

Passage of the Wagner-Steagall housing bill, now before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, was recommended to Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman, by the American Institute of Architects housing committee in a letter from the committee chairman made public last night.

Walter R. McCormack, of Cleveland, is chairman of the architects' committee. In his letter he said:

"First, we feel that no real advance in housing will be made until some centralized authority such as set up in the bill is created, which will be in a position to make the proper research and to encourage the formation of housing authorities throughout the United States. Those interested in housing will then have a group with authority to whom they can go with constructive suggestions."

Delay Opposed.

"Second, we do not believe that the United States can much longer defer an attack on the question of sub-standard dwellings for the millions of people in America who are not properly housed. The country cannot afford to have any great percentage of its population living in quarters unfit for habitation, and many governments have fallen because they have neglected the welfare of a large number of their citizens.

"Third, the present housing bill decentralizes housing and places it in the hands of responsible local groups, where it rightly belongs.

"Fourth, capital subsidy has been eliminated which we believe will bring about, through the subsidy proposed, a much better control of the rents.

Influence Doubtful.

"Fifth, from reliable information we find that there are so many families with incomes below $1,000 who cannot, therefore, afford to pay a rental above $15 per month, that we do not believe the housing act will in any way interfere with private industry. In fact, we believe it will eventually act as a stimulant to private capital by setting up a definite line of demaracation between public and private housing.

"Sixth, we believe that there will be great advantage in a centralized authority which has power to carry out extended research in all the fields which are interrelated in housing."

The Folies Bergeres and the Casino de Paris, known to thousands of American tourists, were among the most famous houses occupied.

Premier van Zeeland recently accepted the request of the British and French governments that he undertake a world survey to discover means of breaking down economic barriers.

Nye Says Bill To Draft Riches Aids Profiteers

Urges People Be Given Power to Decide on War Declarations.

Asbury Park, N. J., April 18.—Senator Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota Republican, contended today the Hall-Shepherd bill for drafting men and wealth in wartime would swell rather than curb the profits of private munitions manufacturers.

"The Hall-Shepherd bill does a fine job of drafting human lives and the laborer in the factory," Nye, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, declared at a peace rally in the Convention Hall, "but it doesn't do much else."

He said the United States entered the World War to protect the profits of private munitions manufacturers whom he charged sold "to every nation that had the money to buy."

"Won War, Not Peace."

"We won the war but we didn't win the peace," he said. "We lost every cause we fought for."

As a means of keeping the United States out of future foreign wars, Nye advocated a constitutional amendment to give the people an opportunity to vote on whether Congress could declare war.

He called for "demilitarization of our schools and an end of compulsory military training," urged legislation to "put the racketeers out of the private munitions business," advocated legislation to prohibit American munitions manufacturers from selling to "anyone but the United States in either peacetime or wartime."

Urging prohibition of loans by bankers for expansion of credit to any warring nations, he stated:

"To those who say our foreign trade will suffer, I say all the foreign trade in kingdom come is not worth a repetition of our experience of 20 years ago."

Every American should receive notice, he said, "that if America is going to engage in war, not one penny of profit is going to be made as long as the war lasts."

The meeting was sponsored by the Monmouth County unit of the emergency peace campaign.

G-Man Shot By Bandits in Kansas Is Dead

Operation and 2 Blood Transfusions Fail to Save F. B. I. Agent.

The keys, Brantley said, were turned over to authorities by the doctor, whom he did not name, and as a result Kansas City officers found the money at the hotel.

Presumably, although Brantley was not specific, the doctor was Dr. S. M. Hibbard, of Sabetha, Kans., who reported Friday night to officers that he had been seized by the fugitives and forced to treat the wound of one.

Suhay and Power, both former convicts, had registered at the Kansas City Hotel on Thursday.

In a room of the hotel the agents and city detectives, including Lieut. Frank Howland and John Costello, found two plain white envelopes with the money. The envelopes presumably had been concealed in the room before Suhay and Power left for Topeka. The agents and detectives also found five suitcases and 12 suits of clothing, all of expensive material.

After their seizure by the Nebraska country sheriff the gangsters were moved to Omaha and then placed in separate automobiles for intensive questioning and brought to Kansas City.

Baker entered the bureau in 1933 as a law clerk.

In 1936 Baker enrolled in the special training course for Federal agents and when he was graduated early this year he was assigned to the branch office at Kansas City. He was unmarried.

Pastor Starts Move for Legal Mercy Killings

Declares Insane, Incurables Should Be Put to Death Painlessly.

By the United Press.

New York, April 18.—Congenital idiots, the hopelessly insane, and the incurable sick whose every breath is a torture, should be put to death, the Rev. Charles Francis Potter said tonight as he launched a campaign to legalize mercy-killing in the United States.

"We need an American society for the legaliaztion of mercy-killing," said the founder and leader of the first humanist society of New York. "We ought to have courage to face reality."

Thousands of persons throughout the United States, he said, are ready to join the campaign. Pressure will be brought to bear on Legislatures and, finally, Congress.

Potter pointed out that Senator John H. Comstock, of Lancaster, introduced a bill in the Unicameral Leigslature of Nebraska to make it possible to kill the afflicted without being charged with murder.

"Taxpayers who, through ignorance, religious fear or a mistaken sense of maudlin humanitarianism, permit incurables to be kept alive by the thousands for many years in State-supported institutions, deserve to pay the increasingly higher taxes and have no right to complain," he said.

Potter said these incurables are "a worry to relatives and a big expense to the State."

"We ought to have the moral courage," he said, "to put them out of the way. A little chloroform and it would all be over. Just think how much better that would be than permitting them to live and suffer through, no one knows how many, tortuous years."

Religion, Potter said he believed, is responsible for holding back legalization of mercy-killing.

"Neither mercy-killing nor suicide is expressly forbidden in the Bible," he explained, "but since the time of St. Augustine, in the fifth century, the church has followed his interpretation that the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill,' prohibits mercy-killing or suicide."

Capital Man Dies In Pa. Auto Crash

Slippery Rock, Pa., April 18.—One man was killed instantly and two others injured late yesterday when a truck, allegedly driven by J. B. Hartham, of Albion, Pa., swerved from the Black Top road on a curve at Jacksonville near here. As the vehicle almost overturned the three were hurled from the place where they were sitting just behind the cab on the flat bed truck, it is said.

The dead man, J. D. Smiley, of 1519 White Place southeast, Washington, aged 37, was identified from cards in his pocket as a World War veteran, enlisting in June, 1917, in the United States Army and serving in France and Belgium with Company K, of the 119th Infantry. His honorable discharge papers were also in his pocket, the place of birth was given as Rocky Mountain, N. C.

He was hitch-hiking to Cleveland, it is said, with two companions, and was picked up by Hartham at Porterville. The other two men were taken to the hospital and a report of their injuries has not been obtained as yet. State police and the coroner are investigating the accident.

Girls Describe Room Visits by Orphans' Head

Say Accused Superintendent Pinched Them; Official Shocked.

By the Associated Press.

Putnam, Conn., April 18.—Two girl inmates charged before a legislative investigating committee today that they fled the Windham County home for children April 9 to escape the "unfatherly" attentions of Philip J. Provandie, the superintendent.

After hearing the stories of dark-eyed Leah Contois, 15, and Lena Vitiaz, 17, at an extraordinary session in the County Home, State Senator Pierre J. Laramee said:

"As a result of questioning the two girls who ran away from the home, we are going much deeper into this investigation. I was shocked by what I heard."

The girls accused the stubble-bearded, bespectacled head of the orphan home, now held under $1,000 bail on charges of indecent assault, of attempting to fondle them, and of slipping into the girls' dormitory late at night and turning a flash-light on the thinly-clad forms.

The two inmates also alleged that Provandie lay on top of the sheets covering their beds, in the hot summer months, and said he used to creep up behind them, pinching them while they were at work in the kitchen and laundry.

Senator Laramee, who called the legislative session again today after a seven-hour meeting Saturday, announced that other girl inmates of the home who complained of unwelcome advances would be questioned starting tomorrow.

Posting of Traffic Collateral In Precincts Will Begin Today

Central Office Abolished by New Order; Accused Motorists May Put Up Bail in Any Station, to Suit Convenience.

Beginning this morning collateral for traffic violation notices may be posted in any of the twelve precinct stations and the Traffic Division.

Meanwhile, the investigation under way of "ticket-fixing" which has spread from one man through the entire department, lagged, only to be resumed today.

The abolition of central collateral office at the Traffic Division effective this morning will bring about the new setup which will allow motorists to post collateral in the precinct most convenient for them.

Officials yesterday indicated they expected quite a bit of confusion for the first week under the new system. The financial clerk of Police Court, under the new system, will receive reports from all stations instead of just the Traffic Bureau. This, it was said, will necessitate a great deal of record-keeping and probably result in mix-ups.

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards assistant superintendent of police, is expected to begin a survey into ticket "fixing" which will cover every unit of the department.

One man who was said to have "fixed" more than 50 tickets already has been transferred from the Traffic Bureau and officials said he will be brought before a Police Trial Board on charges.

To take the place of the proposed periodic general inspection of motor vehicles, Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, yesterday suggested inspection of used cars offered for sale, cars involved in accidents, and cars found to be in unsafe condition. The suggestion was made in a letter addressed to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

"When I recently wrote to the Bureau of the Budget," he said in part, "with reference to inspection of motor vehicles in the District of Columbia, I had in mind the conditions exposed by the American Automobile Association with reference to the sale of used cars in a dilapidated and unsafe condition. It was particularly with the way in which the inspection laws were being evaded because the District is without adequate funds and facilities for such inspection in District owned and operated garages.

"However, I note that the revised bill would be revenue raising rather then safety legislation. I am strongly opposed to this idea and many of my colleagues share this view.

"Therefore I am wondering whether it would not be feasible to approach this inspection problem by degrees, instead of on a wholesale basis that would place new taxes on all motorists at a time when other tax increases are threatened."

3 Snatch $15,000 Loot From Riders In N. Y. Elevator

New York, April 18 (AP).—Three men robbed passengers of a Park avenue hotel elevator early today of loot valued by the victims at more than $15,000.

Four diamond bracelets, valued at $15,000, were taken from Mrs. Mortimer Slater; a wallet containing $126 was taken from her husband, a retired clothing firm executive, and a diamond ring and $16 in cash from Mrs. Louis Nova.

A fourth victim, Mrs. Sarah Klotz, although wearing evening clothes, like her companions, pleaded she was "a poor woman," and was not molested.

Wallace Visions Co-operative Era

New York, April 18 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said today "the age we are now entering might with equal accuracy be called 'the new individualism' or 'the new collectivism.'"

Addressing the Society for Ethical Culture, he said:

"It would seem to me that the time has now come to combine the good characteristics of the individualism developed during the past 300 years with a more conscious recognition of the general welfare.

"In most of his personal activities, I anticipate that each individual in the years to come will have more choice and more freedom than at any time in the past. But I also anticipate that the economic life will be more expressed through groups having very clearly defined rights and responsibilities.

"The corporation and co-operative, the trade union and the farm organization are only partially developed expressions of that which apparently is required if a continually expanding technology is to serve all the people."

A Federal plant at Pocatello is speeding production of poisoned steam-crushed oats which county agents may distribute to mice-afflicted farmers.

Puerto Rico Sees Good English Plea Only in Spanish

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 18 (AP).—A letter from President Roosevelt to Puerto Rico's new commissioner of education urging a knowledge of English for the islanders was published today—but only in Spanish.

There were no English language newspapers in which it might appear.

In the letter, the President said: "It is an indispensable part of American policy that the coming generation of American citizens in Puerto Rico grow up with complete facility in the English tongue." The letter was addressed to Dr. Jose M. Gallardo, the new commissioner, formerly of the College of Charleston, S. C.

The presidential statement urging greater emphasis on English instruction to bring about bilingualism was interpreted by many as indicating a conviction in Washington that Puerto Rican independence was the aim of a minority and not representative of the islands.

Killer Saws Way Out Of Iron Cage, Escapes

Albany, Ga., April 18 (AP).—Hoyt Summers, Atlanta slayer, and two other prisoners sawed out of a steel cage at the Dougherty County chain gang camp early today and escaped in a motor car. Lovett Martin, serving life for murder in Pierce County, and Jack Watts, a burglary convict, accompanied Summers, Deputy Sheriff L. B. Herring reported.

Herring said the three convicts took a motor car parked at a house here. Summers, convicted in 1934 for the holdup killing of Max Sjoblom, Davenport (Iowa) auto-parts salesman, has escaped twice before.

Telephone Girl Is Slain; Suitor Fails in Suicide

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., April 18.—An attractive switchboard operator in a Newark newspaper office was fatally shot today, detectives said, by a suitor who also tried to take his own life.

Police found the wounded couple about noon in an automobile parked near Mount Pleasant Cemetery in the residential section of the city. Shot in the head and breast, Mrs. Lois Duffy, 32, died before arrival at City Hospital. Allen W. Smith, 28, former publicity manager for a local theater, was taken to the hospital in critical condition from a head wound.

Detective John Staats, of the homicide squad, said a .32-caliber pistol was in Smith's right hand when police arrived. Both were in the front seat of Smiths' car, with Mrs. Duffy behind the wheel. Boys in the neighborhood notified police of the tragedy.

Staats said the motive for the double shooting had not been determined. Smith, he said, had called Mrs. Duffy by telephone this morning, had picked her up at her apartment and driven to the place where the car was found.

The detective said Mrs. Duffy was separated from her husband and was the mother of a girl in her 'teens. Fellow workers at the newspaper office were surprised at word she was married and said they had believed her daughter was her sister.

She came to Newark from Boston about eight years ago, they said, and worked as an operator for the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. before coming to the Ledger in 1932. Smith, they said, had told friends he was going to marry her. He lost his theater job three weeks ago.

O'Conor Opposes Gross Tax in Md.

Baltimore, April 18 (AP).—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor came out tonight against Gov. Harry W. Nice's proposal for a revival of the gross receipts levy to raise relief money and urged Democratic legislators to take the responsibility for the formulation of a new relief to tax program.

O'Conor called upon the Democrats as representatives of the majority party in the State to find some alternative for the gross-receipts tax and suggested a consumers' sales levy, mandatorily imposed on the purchaser, is preferable to the Governor's recommendation.

Letter to All Rectors Opposes Remarriage of Those Divorced

Fifteen Episcopal Clergymen Ask Every Bishop and Priest in U. S. to Block Church's Sanction for Such Unions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—A statement signed by 15 prominent Episcopal clergymen, it became known today, has been sent to every Episcopal bishop and priest in the United States urging them to oppose efforts to have the church legalize re-marriage after divorce.

The statement declared that marriage "for Christian people" after divorce is contrary to the teachings of Christ and that the church has no power "by canon law or otherwise to change the teachings on this matter."

The signers said there might be a "legitimate question about the right of the church to bless" re-marriages of innocent parties in divorces secured on the grounds of adultery, "but in no others."

"We are sure," the statement said, "that the passage of canons which in any way modify for Christians the divine law in respect to marriage after divorce will result in the raising of grave doubts in the minds of many about the faithfulness of the Anglican Communion to its divine master, and this to the grave injury to the cause of Christ."

A spokesman for the signers said the move was intended to show sympathy with the stand of English Church officials on the Duke of Windsor's forthcoming marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and to protest against efforts to persuade the Episcopal General Convention, which meets soon in Cincinnati, to modify its canons in this respect.

Virginia Opens Lee Boulevard Bids Tomorrow

Highway Group to Celebrate Success of Long Work for Extension.

Opening of bids tomorrow by the Virginia State Highway Commission for the completion of the remaining 2 miles of the Lee boulevard to the Arlington Memorial Bridge will mark the seventeenth anniversary of the Lee Highway Association.

The opening of bids and the awarding of the contract, which will follow soon after, will mark the end of efforts on the part of State, county officials and citizens to gain the needed rights of way to complete the project, which have been carried on for the past nine years.

More than nine years ago the Lee Highway Association, then headed by Dr. Samuel M. Johnson, conceived the plan for a boulevard 200 feet wide to continue from the Arlington Memorial Bridge through Arlington County to Fort Buffalo at a point where it would meet the Lee highway at Falls Church.

Meeting with the Highway Commission at the Arlington County courthouse nine years ago its offer of rights of way for the project to be known as the Lee boulevard was accepted.

When the project was actually started about five years ago by the State, it was found that rights of way were only available to a point in Lyon Park. The highway was built to that point here it was stopped in the middle of a field. It was open to traffic from Fort Buffalo to North Highland street. This past winter the State continued it to the Washington boulevard, a distance of about a half mile, giving an outlet on Washington avenue thence to Fort Myer.

Fight Expected In Nominations In Takoma Park

Young Democrats Plan to Oppose Incumbents at Caucus Tonight.

A stormy caucus, reminiscent of bitter partisan fights in 1932 and 1934, is predicted for the Takoma Park Fire Hall tonight, when town voters will meet to name candidates for three vacancies on the town council which will be filled at the annual town election on May 3.

A contest for the three positions was made certain yesterday afternoon when the executive committee of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park voted to enter candidates in the race to oppose the three incumbents whose terms are expiring this month. Names of the candidates were not announced.

Company Unions Declared Legal

New York, April 18 (U.P.).—Company unions are legitimate under the Wagner labor relations act, the National Association of Manufacturers assured its members tonight.

At first it was feared the Supreme Court's recent interpretation of the Wagner act outlawed employe representation plans, association officials said.

In an analysis of the decision, the association's legal department found that it applied the commerce power to a new field, but did not extend it to all employment relations in industry.

"The act as interpreted does not compel contract or agreement with anyone, individually or collectively," a statement said. "The obligation created is that of reasonable negotiation with the true representatives of the majority of employes, whether such representatives be from within or without the employers working force."

U. S. Judgeship Delay Blamed On Court Plan

Ohioan Suggests Bench Vacancy to Remain Until After Vote.

Continued delay in appointment of a Federal judge in the Northern Ohio District was linked last night with the President's proposal to add to personnel of the Supreme Court.

An Ohioan here suggested that no action will be taken toward filling the judgeship left vacant by the death of United States Judge George P. Hahn until the Senate has voted on President Roosevelt's court proposals.

In the face of the delay since the vacancy occurred and of this suggestion, Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan last night said the appointment will be made shortly.

Keenan's statement was made on the eve of renewed Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, which begin their final ten days today with the entire week allotted to opposition witnesses to conclude their testimony. An additional three days for proponents' rebuttal has been set aside.

May Not Fill Time.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, said last night, however, the court plan backers may not use all of the allotted three days. Alan Linburg, New York lawyer, is the only witness scheduled to be heard today.

Administration supporters on the issue prepared to drive forward tonight when Attorney General Cummings and Maj. George Berry, Nonpartisan League president, will address a series of mass meetings in 26 cities over a Nation-wide radio network.

Assailants of the plan, however, pursued their unremitting barrage against judiciary revision. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, issued a statement in New York, the Associated Press said, in which he declared the plan would turn the Supreme Court "into an additional and wholly unnecessary legislative body."

Denying age disqualifies justices for service, Butler added that "the orderly growth" of John Marshall and Oliver Wendell Holmes "was itself the fruit of wisdom and experience."

Lodge Speaks Out.

The youthful Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, meanwhile was asserting in Boston "a ruthless man—who might sometime come—taking advantage of the precedent which the President now proposes to establish would appoint puppet judges to the Supreme Court."

The plan is opposed by "Senators who supported President Roosevelt and Garner and Lemke and O'Brien . . ." he added. "If, as some say, it is 'reactionary' to oppose this program, then the word reactionary has no meaning."

Lodge also said there are ways of "changing this situation by simple acts of Congress," but they have "scarcely ever been referred to."

John Q. Tilson, Republican floor leader in 1929-31, said in a New Haven speech, "If I have ever said anything mean about the Democratic Party as such, I now wish to retract it, because in this dangerous crisis Democrats from every State in the Union rose and revolted against such a proposal (the court plan)." He paid special tribute to Democratic Senators opposing the plan.

Vacancy Much Discussed.

The suggestion that appointment of the new Northern Ohio judge will be held up until the court bill passes the Senate came after numerous conferences of Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, with Attorney General Cummings on the vacancy. The Ohioan who made the suggestion asked that his name be withheld.

Senator Donahey, also a Democrat, and Bulkley's colleague from Ohio, opposes the court plan. Donahey has sent to Cummings a list of five persons he considers eligible for the judgeship.

He named Common Pleas Judge Amos L. Conn, of Bowling Green, as his first choice. The others listed were William L. Fiesinger, of Sandusky; Emmet E. Everett, of Lima; Representative Frank L. Loeb, of Celina, and Mrs. Eva Eppstein Shaw, of Toledo.

Bulkley maintained silence as to his preference, although he has arranged conferences with Cummings for several applicants, including Frazier Reams and John W. Hackett, both of Toledo.

Keenan said the appointment would be made as soon as he had an opportunity to talk with Donahey. The Senator returned to Washington two weeks ago from Florida.

Gaston Hits U. S. Rum Production

In a talk yesterday before the Box Bible Class of Emory M. E. Church, Capt. Edward Page Gaston, Army Reserve, of the World Prohibition Federation, criticized the Federal Government for "entering the liquor business." He was referring to the Government's role in the Virgin Islands rum industry.

"According to official figures," Capt. Gaston said, "more than 600,000 gallons of St. Croix rum, largely produced by cheap colored labor, is ready in Government storage to flood the United States market as rapidly as demand develops. That's enough to keep our people drunk for years. The great labor unions may have something to say about this unfair coolie-class competition against the American workingman.

"Millions of dollars of the American taxpayers' money have been poured out on PWA and other projects by Secretary Ickes to help the sparse population of St. Croix and other islands. The principal result is this rum industry, which will only deepen the alcoholic morass into which the national Administration has plunged our American people."

Domingo Acts To Cancel U. S. Customs Rule

Republic Moves to End Control Under Treaty of 1924.

By the United Press.

Taking advantage of President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy, the Dominican Republic has initiated negotiations toward a substitute convention for the treaty of 1924 which gave the United States control over the nation's customs collections, it was learned last night.

The Dominican government took the first step in February through Minister Andres Pastoriza, who submitted a proposed protocol to the State Department. After a number of informal conversations the State Department made a counter proposal in March in the form of a draft project of a convention, submitted, however, merely as a basis for discussion and without committing the United States.

The convention of 1924 gave the President of the United States power to appoint a general receiver of customs to collect duties and use them to pay interest on Dominican bonds, apply on their amortization, and to purchase and cancel the bonds.

The draft basis for negotiations suggested by the United States would turn over customs collection and application of the revenue "to a customs representative designated for the purpose by an executive committee of holders of Dominican bonds."

"Subsequent vacancies," the draft continues, "in the post of customs representative and two principal assistants will be filled by designation of the Dominican President from a list submitted by the executive committee of bondholders containing three names for each vacant post."

This would amount to establishing a relationship between the bondholders and the Dominican government and would take customs collection out of the control of the United States Government.

Fidelity Officers' Ousting Is Sought

Ousting of all former officers of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, recently taken over by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, will be advocated at a special meeting tomorrow afternoon at 2 p. m. in the new Postoffice Building.

A group of large shareholders in the defunct bank have filed a protest with the Federal agency demanding a clean slate on the board of directors. It is understood the group has no objection to the reorganization plan as proposed by the Government, but does strongly oppose remaining of any former officers.

Complete airing of the views of all interested parties is the purpose of the meeting tomorrow. Federal Home Loan Bank officials have final say as to who shall sit on the board and who shall become officers. It is not within the province of the Home Loan to nominate such officers, but it is within their power to reject any persons unsatisfactory to them.

Maryland Farmer Shot to Death In Field by Unidentified Man

Friendsville Planter Killed at Early Morning Hour as He Herded Cows; Friend Rides 40 Miles to Report Crime.

Oakland, Md., April 18.—Perry Dawson, of Crellin, rode into this county seat today to report an unidentified assailant shot down and killed Quinter Hook, Friendsville farmer, and chased away a son who went to investigate the fatal gunfire.

The mountain hamlet of Friendsville, 40 miles north of here, is without telephone communication and Dawson's brief account was all Garrett County officers had to begin their investigation. Sheriff Clarence Spear and State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley left at once to seek additional information.

Dawson told the authorities he spent the night at the Hook home and his host, a 55-year-old man, had set out shortly after sunrise to bring the cows from the pasture. Within a few minutes, a shot rang out.

One of the farmer's sons ran to investigate only to be chased back Dawson said, by the man who had slain the father.

Dawson added that when he and others reached Hook the farmer was dead and the killer had disappeared.

Cook Held Motive In Murder Mystery

Inez, Ky., April 18 (AP).—Commonwealth's Attorney John L. Harrington, of Paintsville, Ky., expressed today the opinion that "jealousy" over the cook at a Kentucky mountain log camp was the motive for the slaying 24 years ago of James Watterson, 60-year-old camp superintendent.

The Martin County grand jury indicted Harvey Hardin, 45, on a murder charge after determining Watterson died from a bullet wound and not a heart attack.

The cook, Harrington said, was Mrs. Polly Runyon, mother of Mrs. John Harless, who revived the mystery surrounding Watterson's strange death when she testified she saw Hardin, then a school teacher, shoot the college-bred superintendent as he lay asleep in a bunkhouse.

Nye Bond Group Asks Recognition

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, protested to President Frederico Bru of Cuba yesterday against permitting a committee organized by the Chase National Bank to represent holders of defaulted Cuban bonds in settlement negotiations this week.

As chairman of the bondholders committee for Republic of Cuba bonds, he said his group was "the only independent body qualified to speak for the American bondholders" and was authorized by the Securities Commission.

Nye said his committee had received no invitation to the conference, but that a committee formed by the Chase National Bank had been asked to attend.

Nye requested Bru to recognize his committee as "qualified spokesmen" for the bondholders, and that the bank's committee be recognized only as a representative of the bank.

Byrd Pictures Mounting Costs In Government

Senator, Citing Brookings Data, Warns of Fixed Charge Increases.

been submitted to the select Senate committee investigating Government expenses as part of the foreword to the institution's previously submitted studies, Senator Byrd said:

"The Brookings figures showing growth in space requirements, if translated into skyscraper dimensions, indicate that Eight Empire State buildings would be needed to house agency activities in Washington, and 52, or more than one for each State, to house the activities in the field. These figures are exclusive of space required for military establishments, veterans' hospitals and public health facilities."

Byrd said the Brookings survey found that from 1933 to 1935 the Federal space in Washington increased from 12,552,138 square feet to 15,844,957, and that outside Washington from 56,239,294 square feet to 102,409,199.

Increases Stressed.

These figures were in furtherance of Byrd's discussion of pay roll costs, which the figures placed as in excess of $1,500,000,000 annually, "exclusive of relief, military and pension rolls" and including only the civil executive branch. Byrd then continued:

"It is shown that between December, 1934, and September, 1936, the civil personnel increased more than 1,000 each month except two. More than 85 per cent of the total personnel is shown to be outside the seat of the Government. Twenty-eight agencies are shown as of September 30, 1936, to be employing more than 1,000 in administrative personnel and scores of others range in the hundreds. They were led by the Postoffice Department with more than a quarter of a million.

"Sixty-six per cent of the executive personnel were shown to have been under civil service June 30, 1934, but by June 30, 1936, the percentage had fallen to 60 per cent."

Tracing the rise of annual Federal expenditures from the $1,000,000,000 average before the World War through the $3,000,000,000 approximate average for the post-war years to 1933 up to the $7,000,000,000, exclusive of the bonus, prevailing since, Byrd said the latter increase is due to:

"Interest charges on war-accrued debt; increased cost of regular military establishment, and added expenditures for World War pensions, all of which appear now to be fixed and permanent."

He went on:

"The total debt in 1936 of more than $34,000,000,000 does not include contingent liabilities of the Government totaling nearly $6,000,000,000 in guaranteed obligations of such agencies as the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Federal Housing Administration, Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Tennessee Valley Authority.

"In the light of experience it would appear that greatly increased fixed charges might be expected for a long time."

Figures Demanded.

"The introduction raises the question of whether the so-called emergency expenditures are to be frozen into permanency but points out that their continuation is dependent solely upon the future policy of Congress. The report is, therefore, confined to the question of administrative expenses and states that "inasmuch as the broad structural outlines of the executive branch of the Government have not been radically changed since 1934 the reasons for increased cost of administration must be sought chiefly in the internal expansion of the existing organization."

Demanding "an accurate, authentic, current census of the unemployed," Vandenburg, in his statement, estimated only 2,975,000 persons now are out of work and said that his calculations "would seem to indicate vastly less unemployment than is constantly asserted by the Labor Department."

"We need to know precisely who is unemployed; where they are; why they are unemployed, and whether it is their involuntary or habitual status," he went on, adding that more than 26,000,000 employed had registered with the Social Security Board and that "reliable estimates" show 12,145,000 more unregistered workers, or 38,145,000.

Lubin pointed out that the department does not attempt to estimate the number of unemployed but that it put at 33,500,000 those employed during February, more than 4,500,000 fewer than Vandenberg.

Statements Affirmed.

His chief, Miss Perkins, affirmed these statements, stressing particularly the fact that Labor Department reports on which these estimates are made cover but one week in each month.

"In other words," she went on, "a person who was temporarily laid off during the week would not be included as among those employed. * * * A minimum of about 2½ per cent of the working force of the country is at any given moment away from work because of illness. This fact alone would account for about 850,000 persons not being at their work on any one day."

"The divergency between the estimates made by Senator Vandenberg and those made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics," Miss Perkins said, "arises out of the assumption that the 26,000,000 persons who have registered under the social security act are all employed at the present moment.

"Estimates made by the Social Security Board itself show that there are 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 persons among the 26,000,000 who have registered who, though eligible under the social security act, are not actually at work at the present moment. The board also estimates that there are about 2,500,000 who have registered, but who are eligible. Among these are self-employed persons, domestic workers, certain types of professional workers, farmers and agricultural workers, as well as duplications resulting from persons registering more than once.

Approval Unlikely.

"It appears that when Senator Vandenberg added 12,000,000 'employed' ineligible persons to the 26,000,000 who have registered under the social security act he duplicated by approximately 2,500,000 those persons who have already been included among the 26,000,000 who have registered with the Social Security Board. If one adds to this duplication of 2,500,000 the 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 who, though eligible, are not at work at the moment, one finds that the Senator's estimate of the number employed is about 5,000,000 greater than the figures would justify. If these 5,000,000 are deducted from his estimate of 39,000,000, his figure would become 34,000,000, which is within 500,000 of the figure of the Bureau of Labor Statistics."

Despite Vandenberg's demand, pending bills calling for a Nation-wide unemployment census probably will not be approved by the House Census Committee at its meeting Thursday, Chairman Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, said.

"There is no interest on the part of the WPA, no clamor from the Census Bureau, no okeh from the Budget Bureau and no request from the Administration," he added.

Representing towns in nearby Virginia and Maryland, the carriers and distributors will join the crowd that will see President Roosevelt throw the first ball of the season. After the game, the boys will be guests at dinner, then leave for their homes in time to deliver tomorrow morning's Post.

Escorting the boys at the game will be O. R. Scott, J. D. Britt and W. J. McNeil, division managers.

Quads Are Baptized; Hoffman God-Father

Passaic, N. J., April 18 (AP).—The famed Kasper quadruplets—Frances, Felix, Ferdinand and Frank—were baptized in the Lutheran faith today with New Jersey's first citizen, Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, taking active part as godfather.

The Governor held Frances, only girl of the four in his arms as the Rev. Paul E. T. Lemke performed the baptismal ceremony in St. John's Lutheran Church. Four hundred persons were crowded inside the small church and more than 1,000 more assembled outside for what was the first public appearance of the quads, born May 9 to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kasper.

Mrs. Roosevelt Joins Program At Girls' Home

Institution Founded by Mrs. Wilkinson to Mark 50th Anniversary.

With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as principal speaker, the Young Woman's Christian Home, 235 Second street northeast, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its founding tomorrow afternoon.

The First Lady will visit the home at 4:30 p. m., and will appear in a program in which the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, also will participate.

The anniversary will be the occasion for honoring Mrs. Mary G. Wilkinson, whose social vision and philanthropy made the home possible. A portrait of Mrs. Wilkinson, as founder of the institution, will be unveiled, as will be others of Miss Bessie R. Kibbey and Mrs. Flora M. Thompson, whose generous gifts helped the home grow.

Edgar B. Laferty, grandson of Mrs. Wilkinson, has came from Los Angeles, Calif., to unveil his grandmother's portrait.

The story of the modern shelter with its gardens, facilities and medical equipment for young women in need of assistance is one of untiring and unselfish devotion to the ideals of the founder. It began 50 years ago, just after the death of Mrs. Wilkinson's daughter.

Turning from her grief, the mother set aside two rooms of her home at 323 C street for girls of good character who needed a home. She took in two young women, and thus her own house became the first home.

The Young Woman's Christian Home was formally organized soon afterward. On February 23, 1887, Mrs. Wilkinson and 12 other socially minded residents of the Capital incorporated the home, and became its first trustees. By 1890, Mrs. Wilkinson's two rooms were outgrown, and the timely donation from Miss Bessie Kibbey of her residence at 311 C street northwest made possible moving into larger and more adequate quarters.

Mrs. Sophia Rhodes was named the Young Woman's Christian Home's legatee, should she survive her son. Both Mrs. Rhodes and her son lost their lives returning from Europe on the ill-fated Elbe in 1895. As a result, trustees of the home received a gift of approximately $14,000.

Congress supported the home to the extent of a $1,000 annual appropriation for several years. This help was discontinued in 1906 when the trustees felt the work was well enough established to be continued without further Federal aid.

Improvements have been made throughout the years, and gradual expansion has been accomplished. In 1931, the District government took over the property and made it part of the municipal center. Mrs. Flora Markward Thompson, a deeply interested life member, died in that year and left a bequest of $250,000 as a memorial to her husband and mother.

That memorial has taken the form of a new building for the home which now houses 100 young women.

Govs. Murphy Speak on Industry

Boston, April 18 (AP).—Governors Frank Murphy of Michigan (Democrat) and Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire (Republican), who met here tonight for the first time, divided the responsibility for the maintenance of industrial peace between employers and employes.

Both addressed the Massachusetts State Council, Knights of Columbus, at the annual Patriots' Day dinner.

Said Gov. Murphy of Michigan: "The employers of labor must embrace a progressive outlook and adjust themselves to new concepts * * * discard the idea of suppressing any just objectives of labor and accept voluntary co-operation, * * * discard espionage and other unfair practices * * * recognize union action and that the new consciousness permeating the ranks of working men may be for the greatest good of us all."

Said Gov. Murphy of New Hampshire, owner of one of the largest shoe factories in his State:

"We hear much about unfair practices on the part of employers but little about unfair practices indulged in by labor."

Mother, 5 Children Die in Home Blast

Muskego, Wis., April 18 (AP).—Six persons were killed and three critically injured tonight by an explosion which demolished the farm home of John Maszak. A neighbor said 50 pounds of pyrotol, used for blasting stumps, had been stored in the basement.

The force of the explosion scattered parts of the two and a half story frame house over an acre of ground. The dead were Mrs. Mary Maszak, 54, and four of her children. The body of a fifth child had not been found. John Maszak, the father, escaped injury.

Three daughters were taken to the Waukesha Municipal Hospital in a critical condition.

Suspect Is Held As Firebug in 2-Year Terror

N. Y. Police Say Watchman Admits Starting Blazes to Cure Headache.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—A 47-year-old watchman who "always wanted to be a fireman" was under arrest tonight as police and fire officials asserted their search for the "firebug" who caused a two-year siege of terror through the Bronx was at an end.

Deputy Police Inspector John J. O'Connor, in command of 200 officers assigned to the district since week-end apartment fires began with deadly regularity, said the prisoner, George Stanley Preston, had admitted starting several fires to "relieve my headache."

"There is no doubt but that Preston is the firebug we have been looking for," O'Connor said after the watchman had been booked on an arson charge. He said the special officers detailed to patrol tenement entrances and hallways after ten people died in mysterious fires would be returned to regular duty.

John Haggerty, who saw a man setting fire to a pile of rubbish in the four-story tenement where he lives at 3 a. m., captured Preston after a short chase, climaxed by a fist fight.

Deputy Inspector O'Connor said Preston admitted responsibility for many fires and took detectives on a tour to point out buildings in which he had applied matches to piles of rubbish.

Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy, who joined detectives in the investigation, said Preston was "a dangerous alcoholic pyromaniac."

Police who questioned the quiet-mannered watchman said he told them he set fire to "many buildings" during 1936, but denied having had anything to do with fatal blazes in which ten tenement residents were killed and many injured.

O'Connor said the prisoner described how he usually took "one or two drinks to get an edge on," then, with a thumping headache pounding in his brain, sought a likely entrance in which to start a fire.

Usually, O'Connor said the prisoner told him, the fires were started in rubbish piles beneath wooden staircases from where the flames swept upward rapidly, cutting off the exit for sleeping occupants.

After an alarm was sounded, he quoted Preston as saying, the watchman would stay to watch the firemen extinguish the blaze.

Spanish Patrol By 4 Countries Begins Tonight

trances of Las Arenas and Portugalette, the ports of Bilbao, were not minded and that the Basque coast defense guns were keeping insurgent warships many miles offshore.

Dispatches from Gijon, on the northern Spanish coast, reported without confirmation that three British destroyers had escorted the British freighter Thorpehall from Bilbao to Musel, a coaling port in nearby Oviedo Province. Two destroyers were said to have stayed outside the 3-mile limit, but the other accompanied the Thorpehall to within a mile of Musel Harbor.

(The Thorpehall previously had been stopped twice by insurgent warships blockading government-held portions of the Spanish coast.

(The British Government recently announced its warships would protect British shipping outside the 3-mile limit of Spanish territorial waters, but would not act inside that limit. British freighters were advised not to try to run the insurgent blockade of Bilbao, where food supplies were running low.

(The British admiralty reported approaches to Bilbao had been mined by the insurgents.)

A Bilbao dispatch reported insurgent airplanes carried out three raids over Bilbao Sunday afternoon. Their bombs caused several casualties. Government air squadrons fought a pitched battle with the invaders over the city and one insurgent bomber was shot down.

Basque reports today declared that suspension of the insurgents' fierce thrusts toward Bilbao meant that the offensive which has drawn a ring of steel close around the city has been "permanently halted."

Basque and Spanish government planes heavily bombed bodies of insurgent troops concentrating in the villages of Ondarroa and Anguiozar for a further offensive. Basque dispatches said many soldiers were blown to bits and many others wounded by bombs and shrapnel.

New Victories Claimed.

Madrid, April 18 (AP).—The Spanish government today reported success for its armies as heavy fighting continued on the widely-separated fronts of Teruel, 150 miles east of the capital, and Cordoba Province, an almost equal distance to the south.

Still attacking vigorously in its effort to reduce the Teruel salient in the insurgent lines, the government concentrated large forces of infantry, artillery, tanks and airplanes in the vicinity of Celadas, 18 miles northwest of Terule.

Action around Madrid centered on the attempt to keep the insurgent garrison of 3,000 in University City, on the capital's western fringe bottled up. All efforts of the insurgents in the nearby Casa de Campo to pass food across the Manzanares River to the besieged garrison failed.

In Cordoba Province the insurgents attaced vigorously in an attempt to drive government forces back from the mountain positions they have seized near the vital highway running northwest from Cordoba City, which forms the main line of communications for Gen. Francisco Franco's armies in that region.

Pan-American Gives Details of New Air Giants

Atlantic Planes Twice as Large as Clipper Ships to Carry 80.

The largest transport airplanes ever developed—designed especially for transatlantic service and twice the size of the giant clipper planes now flying the Pacific—were described for the first time last night by officials of Pan-American Airways.

Orders for six of the planes were placed with the Boeing Aircraft Co., of Seattle, Wash., following conferences in Washington between England and the United States for settlement of differences over transatlantic air routes nearly a year ago.

The planes have been under construction at the Boeing plant since last year, but their huge dimensions and the unprecedented power have been kept secret.

Twenty-six 1,500-horsepower motors have been developed for the planes by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. In a statement last night, Pan-American described the motors as the most powerful for aircraft.

The new air giants will have a capacity of 72 passengers and a crew of eight, according to Boeing engineers. In addition, cargo holds will carry 5,000 pounds. The ships will weigh between 40 and 50 tons and will be capable of a speed of nearly 200 miles an hour.

Goliaths Described.

"Based upon the experience Pan-American Airways has accumulated over the past ten years in over-water flying, particularly in the two years in which their clipper ships have logged better than a million miles of flying over the Pacific Ocean, the big boats will have many features never heretofore incorporated in airplanes. The giant boats will have three decks. The flight bridge with posts for six flying officers, will be located on the top deck beneath the huge wing. Back of the bridge and the captain's compartment, and within the very wing itself, are sleeping and living quarters for the crew, including a separate galley. Aft of the officers' quarters is a big cargo compartment, itself larger than the cabin on present-day overland transports.

"Running the length of the ship, beneath the flight deck, is the main deck on which the passenger cabins are located. These will include, in addition to regular cabins, private staterooms fore and aft, and a dining and lounge cabin.

5,000-Mile Range.

Forward on this deck is the galley which will be equipped with all facilities for cooking. Hot and cold water will be available throughout the ship.

"The third deck, or hold, where heavy cargo will be carried, is a series of perfectly water-tight compartments running the length of the ship. Fuel tanks capable of carrying a normal supply of 5,000 gallons of gasoline—15 tons—are located in the wings and the sponsons, or "sea wings." Indications are that the new Pan-American super-clippers will have a cruising range of nearly 5,000 miles.

"The engines will be double-row, 14-cylinder Wright Cyclones of a new design. While no details concerning engine performance could be given out, engineers stated that they would be 'nearly twice the size' of the big engines which power present clipper ships.

"For the first time in airplane construction, access is provided to the mechanical plant and to each of the four engines from the companionway in the airliner's giant wing."

$70 Is 'Blessed' By Gypsy Women; Only Paper Left

Two gypsy women yesterday "blessed" $70 for Edward Swinton, colored, 2005 Eleventh street northwest, and Swinton reported to police he had been robbed.

Swinton said the women approached him and said they could bring him good fortune and wealth if he would let them "bless his money."

He agreed and brought out the money, which they placed in a handkerchief. Tying the money around Swinton's neck, they told him not to touch it for a week.

However, when he looked into the bundle it was filled only with paper.

2 D. C. Women Injured In Lee Highway Crash

Two young women were brought to Georgetown Hospital yesterday after the automobile in which they were riding was in a collision on the Lee highway near Falls Church, Va.

Katherine Miller, 25, 2032 Belmont street northwest, was the most seriously injured. She suffered severe cuts and internal injuries. Her companion, Billy Palmer, of the Belmont street address, was treated for cuts and bruises and released.

London Views Rehearsal.

London, April 18 (AP).—In spite of it being a cold, bleak, sunless Sunday morning, scores of thousands of Londoners lined the streets early today to witness a rehearsal of the procession in which King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will proceed to their coronation May 12.

The court and police authorities who will be responsible for this feature of the festivities obtained a vague idea of the crowds they will have to control on the real coronation day.

Beginning at 6:30 a. m. and carefully timed all the way, the procession, including the gilded coach of state, perambulated slowly over the coronation route to enable officials to determine exactly how long the real thing will take.

Persecution Futile, Pastor Declares

The modern Church, though finding itself in troubled times, need not fear, the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, D. D., pastor, declared in his sermon yesterday morning in Luther Place Memorial Church.

"The church is at home in troubled times," Dr. Rasmussen said, "it was born in such.

"Indeed, the place of the Church is greater when pestilence walketh in darkness and destruction wasteth at noonday; and the Church is herself in sounder health when the fury of the world is loosed against her."

Since the beginning the Church has grown despite persecution, he said. "And it seemed to grow in proportion to the vehemence of the persecutions. It was as if the bitter acids poured about the roots of the plant supplied precisely the fertilization needed to produce luxuriant development."

Taft Will Address Social Workers

Charles P. Taft 2d, prominent social worker, will address the annual meeting of the Family Service Association Thursday noon in the Willard Hotel.

Taft, son of the late President William Howard Taft, has for many years been an outstanding figure in civic affairs, not only in Cincinnati, his home city, but also in the Nation. He will speak on "What Is Public Responsibility for Family Welfare and What Should Private Agencies Be Doing?"

At the present time the association, in co-operation with the churches, is conducting a city-wide survey in an effort to determine the status of 3,000 employables who are without jobs and who are not eligible for direct relief. Miss Louise O. Beall is in charge of this study and is being assisted by more than 100 volunteer workers from the various churches in the Federation of Churches.

Not Ready For The Question.

Hearings on the bill to pack the Supreme Court are to continue for another week or ten days despite the fact that all the arguments both for and against the plan have been repeated many times. A fortnight ago members of the Senate Judiciary Committee conceded that they were obtaining little new information from the testimony. Yet they are still reluctant to end the hearings, for that would hasten the necessity of deciding an issue which many are loath to confront.

President Roosevelt is said to be unreceptive to any sort of compromise so far as the objective of his judiciary bill is concerned. But that is not true of many of his supporters. The numerous compromise plans offered by Administration followers in the Senate is sufficient proof of an uneasy feeling among them. By political considerations they are impelled to support the President. But a considerable number are forbidden by conscience to favor such an outright extension of executive domination over the country's highest court.

Especially since the Supreme Court upheld the Wagner labor relations act, legislators already committed to the judiciary bill have been seeking a facing-saving gesture. They do not want to choose between an independent supreme bench and loyalty to the President. The struggle to avoid making any such choice will doubtless continue for several weeks in the Senate Judiciary Committee. It is by no means certain that the President's bill, as sent to Congress, will survive this test.

There should be no difficulty, however, in understanding the reluctance of the White House to compromise. For if the weakness of the President's proposal is once admitted, it will tend to undermine the entire case for packing the court. In principle the addition of two justices to change the interpretation of the Constitution would be just as untenable as the addition of six. Every new move in the direction of face-saving, therefore, strengthens the hope that this scheme will be abandoned in favor of an open appeal to the people for whatever new Federal powers are considered necessary.

Investigating The A. B. C. B.

A frequent check upon the administration of liquor-control laws is undoubtedly desirable. There is general agreement that abuses of the pre-prohibition days must not be permitted to return. Any inquiry tending to support strict enforcement of the law, therefore, is likely to be welcomed by the public.

Unfortunately, that does not appear to be the purpose of the investigation ordered by the House District Committee into the activities of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The liquor-control act clearly intends to prevent any tie-up between manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. For that purpose it permits the board to forbid the extension of unreasonable credit between these groups. When the board discovered liberal credit was being granted retail dealers by wholesalers, the latter were called into a conference for the purpose of fixing reasonable credit terms. It was unanimously agreed that 15 days was a reasonable period for the payment of such bills. To this the board added a two-week period of grace in adopting its fixed policy. Retailers were notified of the arrangement, and no protests were filed.

Thereafter wholesalers were required to file statements with the board showing all bills unpaid for more than 30 days. Delinquents were informed that bills running over that period would have to be paid before their licenses could be renewed. A check-up last March showed 45 retailers delinquent under the credit rule. After hearing their explanations the board penalized 15 by one-day license suspensions and warned 15 others in whose cases extenuating circumstances were found. Decisions are still pending in 15 other cases.

This credit rule has been upheld by the District Court as a reasonable interpretation of the statute. Whether it works a hardship upon liquor dealers is a matter that should be investigated. But the desirability of rigidly separating the wholesale and retail liquor businesses and of strictly enforcing the law is not open to question. The A. B. C. Board should be commended for its careful supervision of the local liquor business. If any of its rules are believed to be arbitrary, changes ought to be sought from the board before invoking a procedure that might weaken the law.

Isolating The Spanish Fire.

It goes without saying that the United States will do all that is possible in the way of unofficial co-operation with the international control scheme which goes into effect on the Franco-Spanish border and around the Spanish coast at midnight today.

The 27 governments which compose the non-intervention committee are not asking formal American assistance in instituting this patrol, designed to insure that no further materials of war shall be smuggled to either side in the Spanish civil war. It is assumed that our own control provisions, under existing neutrality legislation, are keeping American munitions from Spain and that it will, therefore, not be necessary to give any interference to American ships bound for Spanish ports.

This assumption is probably correct, so far as direct shipments are concerned, though there are indications that more American war supplies than appear on State department records have found their way into Spain recently. But the mere fact that the non-intervention committee does not seek our formal collaboration makes the exercise of even stricter control on our part the more essential.

And if the warships of the participating nations should find it desirable to stop an American steamer there should be advance realization here of the reasons for such action. Something in the nature of a blockade is necessary to localize and, therefore, shorten, the Spanish war. Such a blockade is the logical counterpart of our embargo policy and is to be regarded as supplemental to that effort on our part.

The control scheme—one of the most interesting examples of co-operative international action ever attempted—makes its belated start under favorable auspices. The British government's discretion in refusing to open the Port of Bilbao by force has been rewarded by a much more co-operative attitude on the part of Italy, which is now considering withdrawal of its "volunteers" in Spain, provided other nations do the same. Britain's consistent refusal to play the game of either side in the Spanish struggle, while resulting in some criticism from the adherents of both, has evidently made it far easier to launch the control plan in an atmosphere conducive to success.

Facing The Tax Issue.

By approving six new tax measures for the District the Federation of Citizens Associations has taken a realistic and constructive position. There is always a strong tendency for citizen groups to oppose taxes of every sort. In this case, however, the federation wisely recognized the necessity of raising additional revenue if normal community service is to be maintained.

To put the tax problem in its proper perspective additional revenue needs must be translated into urgent demands for more adequate public health service, relief for the unemployed, better schools, more libraries and playgrounds, better regulation of traffic, etc. These and other municipal functions must be supported by the people who derive the chief benefits. In voting for new taxes the federation was merely backing up its urgent pleas for more adequate community service.

It is entirely reasonable that this action should be accompanied by an appeal for more economical operation of the local government. The District Commissioners' request for more funds gives them a double obligation to eliminate every source of waste. Fortunately a special committee is studying the anomalous structure of the municipal government with the object of enhancing its efficiency and lopping off useless expenses. And the tax collecting machinery is being given special attention by the House District Committee.

Presumably the District's need for revenue will be given further consideration by the F. C. A. at a later meeting. The measures which it has approved in principle are expected to raise only $2,675,000, while the prospective deficit for the next fiscal year is more than $6,000,000. To meet the issue fully revenue bills will have to reach beyond insurance companies, corporations, parking lots, places of amusement, inheritances and public utilities. The federation can render a useful service by expressing the opinion of its members as to what other sources of revenue should be tapped.

Traffic Tickets.

Contrary to a popular generalization, traffic tickets in Washington are not "fixed" to any abnormal extent. Every city, of course, knows something of the insidious practice and the Capital at one time was particularly cursed with it, due principally to the superabundance of politicians here. But thanks to the Police Department, "fixing" within the past year has been greatly reduced. A factor in this doubtless was Howard Wentworth's series of articles entitled, "You Can't Arrest Me," appearing in The Post last spring. The series aroused considerable comment and calls for reform on Capitol Hill.

However ticket "fixing" has not been entirely stopped. Nor should it be. Not every traffic ticket is justified—perhaps a car was pushed into a forbidden zone or perhaps a parking sign was defaced and impossible to read. A summons in such cases should clearly be quashed. But unfortunately such extraordinary procedure opens the way to unjustified favoritism. To minimize this, the Police Department this morning will close its collateral bureau, transferring its functions to the commanders of the various precincts. From them will be required a weekly report of all cancellations. Maj. Brown has given warning of severe penalties to follow discovery of any unwarranted leniency.

By thus establishing a closer check upon traffic cases, the possibilities of "fixing" are diminished, at least for the present. Another advantage of the new system will be that henceforward persons with tickets will not be required to wade through the crowded headquarters building to post collateral, but may drive with far greater ease to the most convenient station house to report.

Mr. Van Zeeland's Visit.

Theoretically the statesmen of Europe and America in seeking ways and means of increasing the flow of world trade can resume where they left off in 1933. Technically, the world economic conference held in London that year is still in a state of suspended animation. Actually, however, it belongs in the limbo of false starts, together with so many other well-meant but futile efforts at international co-operation.

Yet a new attempt to revive world trade is now definitely in order. The pressure for international action in that sphere is increasingly making itself felt. And in a number of particulars the situation today is more favorable to co-operative action in that sphere, and in such closely related fields as monetary stabilization, than it was in 1933.

At that time the world was still deep in the depression. Now industrial recovery is under way in every part of the world. But that recovery may prove transient unless international trade begins to catch up with domestic production.

It is this circumstance among others that emphasizes the potential importance of the forthcoming visit to Washington of Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium. As a result of his recent spectacular victory at the polls, Mr. Van Zeeland more clearly than ever before can be said to represent his nation and his people. What is more, he has been assigned by Great Britain and France to a very ambitious role in the field of international affairs. It is his job, at the moment, to serve as the agent of the great democracies of western Europe in negotiations with the Third Reich. The purpose of these negotiations is to sound out the Hitler regime as to its willingness to join with other nations in a program of economic and financial co-operation.

These negotiations will obviously take time. And if they are to be truly successful they must be fitted into a world framework. Hence, Premier Van Zeeland proposes to extend the scope of his soundings as to the possibility of world trade improvement to the United States as well.

It can be taken for granted he will receive a sympathetic reception here. In Secretary Hull he will find a fellow statesman passionately convinced that through the reopening of trade channels economic appeasement can be brought about and the fabric of peace strengthened. Moreover, Mr. Hull, through the reciprocal trade agreements, has been practicing what he preaches.

It would be naive to suppose that any international agreement for the lowering of trade barriers will be easy of accomplishment. The exact opposite is true, as the world textile conference has just indicated. The war debts, Great Britain's determination to continue the experiment of imperial preference, Germany's financial impasse—these and other obstacles are too real to be ignored. Yet the need of freer world trade is so imperative that they need not of themselves stand in the way of a new co-operative effort. In this endeavor the United States can play a very constructive part.

Come And Get It!

There's no fun in peeling potatoes; there's no inspiration in washing dishes; no doughboy ever enjoyed mixing dough; and it is small wonder that the soldier has always detested kitchen policing. It was an unwelcome duty when it came to one normally, and was rightfully considered punishment when one was sentenced to it for misbehavior.

But all this may be presently changed. Army kitchens are now being equipped with modern ranges, steam tables, automatic potato peelers, dishwashers and dough mixers. Kitchen police may be prideful persons privileged to strut their stuff. No menial tasks for them!

And think of the fun they will have if one of the machines gets out of order! Is there anything more delights a man than to tinker with machinery? That's why ever so many men buy old cars and old motorboats. They kid themselves with the thought that they will be going somewhere. But they really don't want to go anywhere. All they want to do is to tinker.

And when the darned thing goes at last—car, boat, dough mixer, dishwasher or potato peeler—think of the pride and satisfaction there is in it!

The story is told of a small boy who deliberately misbehaved so that he would be made to sit with the girls, which was once upon a time considered a punishment. One wonders if something of the kind may not happen in the Army in the matter of kitchen policing.

The other day a Denver man tried for petty theft paid a $10 fine with a counterfeit bill. It's getting so these days you can't trust anybody.

Compulsory Saving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many words have been used to bewail the oversupply of labor, especially in regard to the younger generation coming into age who cannot find employment.

I urge that all workers have one-tenth of their pay or salaries deducted and forwarded to the United States Treasury, with interest at 4 per cent compounded annually. By the end of 30 years such employes will be independent of labor. Their retirement would be paid from this fund and they could step aside for the younger set.

There is no reason why one should be permitted to be a pauper because he would not or could not save. Let the law save for him and instead of having progress and poverty we would have progress and prosperity. Poverty would be forever abolished by this simple expedient of compulsory saving.

This 10 per cent deduction should be applied to all Government employes and they would retire at the end of 30 years or sooner. The present 3½ per cent deduction yields $30,000,000, but a 10 per cent deduction would yield $90,000,000 and the Government would not have to contribute a penny and it should not.

Veterans And The Chest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the information of Mr. John J. Jackson, whose letter in regard to support of the American Legion by the Community Chest appears in your issue of April 15, I wish to state that only the welfare department of the Legion draws support from the Chest. This department cares for veterans and their families who are in distress, regardless of whether or not they are members of the Legion. All other Legion activities are supported by dues and other sources of income.

Mr. Jackson would do well to get facts before condemning the Chest. He refers to Chest support for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and says "it would seem to me that the Disabled Veterans Association should have first consideration." For his information, the V. F. W. is not in the Chest and the Disabled American Veterans of the World War is affiliated with it.

There are 65 welfare organizations in the Community Chest. The welfare department of the American Legion is only one. If Mr. Jackson is so opposed to contributing to "veterans' organizations" he can surely find some orphanage, children's home, nursing service, hospital, boys' club or other institution among the remaining sixty-four in which he is interested, and can contribute to that one through the Chest, leaving the support of the Legion's welfare department to those who are interested in veterans.

If Mr. Jackson will take the trouble to examine the work of the agencies supported by the Chest—if he will visit even one of these agencies—I am sure he will revise his attiture toward the Chest.

Still The Protests Pour In.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was gratifying indeed to read your enlightened editorial in The Post, about a week ago, on the subject of the proposed annihilation of the famous cherry trees. Ever since they were presented to the City of Washington by the Japanese government, they have annually attracted thousands of beauty-loving sightseers and tourists, to be enraptured by the sight of the masses of exquisite white blossoms with which April covers them every year. They are a tradition of Washington, peculiarly appropriate, associated as the cherry tree is with the youth of the Father of His Country himself. Besides they contribute so much artistic charm to the city.

No monument, no matter how magnificent, to that other great patriot and statesman, Thomas Jefferson, could compensate for the destruction of the far greater natural beauty it would displace. Moreover, Jefferson was above all things a lover of nature and all that was naturally beautiful.

To destroy these trees would be an irreparable loss to the city's distinction and charm, an insult to their distinguished donor, and small tribute to him in whose honor their exquisite beauty would be demolished. E. E. ROBERTS.

Bryn Mawr, Pa., April 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am greatly in favor of a fitting memorial to Thomas Jefferson. But why should the beauty of the Tidal Basin be affected by destroying the cherry blossoms which draw thousands of visitors each year to our fair city, to make way for this memorial?

How many more practical and useful ways could we use the money than for a statue. For instance, why not build a new bridge to replace the old inadequate one at the end of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and call it the "Thomas Jefferson Memorial Bridge?" Besides being a lasting memorial it would also insure security to the thousands who cross it daily.

Another way of expressing our devotion could be in the form of a stadium at the end of East Capitol street and named the "Thomas Jefferson Memorial Stadium." An up-to-date stadium with a large seating capacity would not only be a fitting memorial to him but also prove a source of income. A READER.

Washington, April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your editorial of April 7 in connection with the destruction of the cherry trees, and I would like to add my protest to that of other nature-loving citizens of Washington to the removal of these trees from around the Tidal Basin.

Why destroy these trees which add so much beauty to Washington in the spring of the year to put up a memorial to Thomas Jefferson on this particular site? Why is man so determined to destroy nature, which is an evidence of God's love for mankind, to put up buildings of his own design?

I also feel that it is an insult to Japan to destroy these trees which were given to this country as a token of her friendship for the United States. If a memorial to Thomas Jefferson is desired why not put it at some other place in the city that needs improvement?

While on this subject I would like to protest against the placing of earthen fills in Rock Creek Park to carry cross traffic. This would be an unwarranted destruction of another beauty of nature.

ALETHEA J. MORGAN.

Washington, April 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I offer a word of praise on the letter you published by Mr. Harry Hass in The Post about the Jefferson Memorial.

I too, believe that the lives of our people come first. Good health is a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." With it we see beauty; without it our vision is extremely dull. Therefore, let us spend where it is most needed.

The medical profession is the greatest on earth. With it a better world goes on, without it we are a hopeless race groping in the dark. Is it not more sensible to put such a vast sum of money into a worthy cause, than into art?

Give our doctors better hospitals, and facilities to work properly with, lift the heavy burden of finances from their weary shoulders, but above all don't let the almighty dollar hinder brilliant, capable minds.

Unharness your men in white, Uncle Sam, and they'll repay you a thousand fold. Your children need their aid, not marble statues. I believe that would be Thomas Jefferson's wish if he were alive today.

C. H. GILLES.

Labor Agitator Picture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While a group of men were "enjoying" that picture in your issue of April 10 depicting those brave policemen upholding the "majesty of the law" by transporting an "obstreperous" woman labor agitator along the public thoroughfare in a most shameful position, the most youthful of the group made the rest of them hang their heads in shame when he said: "If that was my wife or sister whom those ruffians had carried along the street in that manner I would shoot every last one of them."

Reflection upon this youth's remark brings up the wonder that some witnesses of the spectacle, with an iota of decency in him had not the courage to smash the photographer's camera on the spot (as well as his head). Another thought that occurs is that the editor or publisher of a self-respecting newspaper, though they feel that they are required to publish all available news should so far forget all decency as to find it necessary to print the name of the lady who happened to be the unfortunate victim of this brutal proceeding in the account.

After the public display of this picture, were I one of the policemen portrayed therein, I would resign from the force, hang my head in shame and go to some far off town where I could hide my identity among strangers.

Alphonse Of Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 13 an article appeared about Alphonse de Bourbon, the former King of Spain, who, hoping to be restored to the throne, has been financing Gen. Franco.

Ever since the days of the Visigoths the people of Spain have been inclined to anarchism. This is indicated in the following part of the coronation ceremony: "We who are as important as you and who together are more powerful than you; we promise to obey your government, if you maintain our rights, and privileges and if not, no."

There is no one species of government known which will suit every people in the world without regard to their background, habits, nature and temperament. An anarchistic people in the very nature of things cannot be self-governing. The only way to maintain order and authority among them is by the use of force; hence an absolute monarchy is the best type of government for such people.

For centuries Spain has been waiting for a ruler strong enough to make it a great nation. Alphonse had and still has the opportunity to be this man of destiny. He was never heir apparent to the throne but was born King of Spain. He was a nominal ruler in a limited monarchy. His policy should have been to have seized the real power in his own hands and established an absolute monarchy.

District Working Weeks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bill introduced by Representative Mary T. Norton last Thursday to regulate the number of working days per week for people employed in the District is an important step toward betterment of working conditions for all. Next to the recently revised minimum wage law this is one of the most constructive measures to ever be put before the Congress.

Men, in particular, here in the District are being forced to work every day in the year, impairing their health and detracting from their efficiency by not having the proper amount of rest and surcease from their daily toil. This bill, should it be passed, will not only contribute to the general health of the community but also would help the employers by reason of the fact their employes would be more vigorous in performing their respective duties for the week after having a day of rest. The World Of Kirpal Singh

Reprinted, in part, from the Living Age, being a translation of an article by Anita Kashyap originally published in the Basel National-Zeitung.

WHEN a European hears or reads about a Brahmin, he usually imagines a strange, exotic individual, priestlike and unworldly, who has to perform an ablution if the shadow of an Untouchable falls upon him. The Brahmin about whom I shall speak is not at all like this. In appearance he does not differ from a modern young European: his skin is hardly a shade darker. He is a graduate engineer, speaks English fluently, and is as well informed about electrical equipment, Diesel motors, steam turbines, pump stations, etc., as is his European colleague. In Kandhagel, a mountain hamlet two hours from Simla, he manages and supervises the little power station; he earns 150 rupees a month, and on this he, his wife, and his two children modestly live.

I would not have given the matter of his caste a second thought if I had not noticed that he observed the ancient food laws scrupulously—a rare thing among the educated younger generation in India. He refused not only meat and egg, but also cake and chocolate; in fact, almost everything the preparation of which he was not sure about, for he was afraid that it might contain eggs or animal fats. He did not eat from our plates, because meat and eggs might previously have lain upon them; and once, during the picnic, he even refused fruit, because it had been on the same plate as the egg sandwiches.

All this seemed rather startling, especially after the inspection of the modern electrical power plant, with its new European machines. I questioned him a bit and learned that he was a Brahmin who, despite his modern profession, conformed to the ancient laws of the Holy Scriptures, which he eagerly studied.

"What do you think of Dr. Ambedkar?' I asked him. Dr. Ambedkar was the talk of the day; he is an educated Sudra (i. e., he belongs to the caste of the Untouchables) who believes that he has been appointed to be a leader of his fellow men; in their name he demanded the abolition of Untouchability, threatening a mass conversion to Christianity or to Islam in case his demands were not fulfilled.

The Brahmin, whose name is Kirpal Singh, answered me without hesitation: "Inasmuch as Dr. Ambedkar wants to put an end to hatred and demands friendly relations between us and the Sudras, I am fully in accord with him; but one must oppose him for favoring joint meals, drawing water from the same well, common church service, and even marriages between the higher castes and the Untouchables."

"In other words, you are against the abolition of Untouchability?"

"Yes," he replied, "but that does not alter my conviction that we owe the members of the Untouchable caste the same love and respect we do our own brothers."

"But how is this division possible?" I asked, astonished. "If you don't shake hands or take your meals with the Sudra, how can he feel anything but the dreadful humiliation which you inflict upon him?"

"Oh, no," he said, "that is not so." And after a while he continued: "I want to tell you of an experience of my early youth. I always used to spend my vacation with my grandparents in our home village. One evening my grandmother and I were sitting in front of our house when a girl who was employed to sweep the streets stopped and asked my grandmother for some information about the date of Bassant, our spring festival. 'Bibi mathatekdie bang,' said my grandmother, "we shall celebrate on such and such a day." Those words mean: 'Maiden, I greet thee with reverence!'"

"That grandmother had shown the pariah girl the same respect we give all unmarried young girls of the higher castes impressed me deeply and made me realize that the Untouchables also have a claim to our love and esteem."

* * * *

"All right," I said, "but nevertheless neither your grandmother nor you yourself would sit down at the same table with Dr. Ambedkar, though he is doubtless a very educated, clean and well-dressed man?"

"No," he said; and, noticing my astonished look, he added in the same reserved and explanatory tone: "Our conception of cleanliness is different from the European. It is not enough for a person to be clean and well-dressed in order to be considered pure. Our philosophy teaches us that the whole world is but the body of the infinite God. Just as we regard parts of our body as unclean and do not touch them, or if we have touched them, wash our hands with soap, just so much is that part of God's body unclean which is formed by the Untouchables."

Horrified, I replied: "But how can this analogy be correct? I can see that according to a religious conception evil, immoral people might be regarded as unclean and their touch and influence be avoided. But to brand millions of these pitiable creatures as unclean who have committed no other crime than to be born the children of Untouchables—is that not cruel and unjust?"

"According to our doctrine of Karma nothing is accidental," the Brahmin replied. "Only he who has deserved this fate through his conduct in a previous life is born an Untouchable. Our own acts determine our fate in the next incarnation. An Untouchable is not to be pitied, for he is only doing penance for crimes committed. If in this life he has shown himself deserving, in his next incarnation he may be reborn a member of a higher caste."

A Cockeyed Country.

Miami.

I SWEAR I don't know what to make of this crazy, crooked, hilarious but altogether pleasant town. The locals don't know what to make of it, either, and perhaps the best way is not to look for the answer but just take it easy and have a good time.

For a dozen years the boys have been saying that the rough and tumble days were now past and that starting next fall Miami would grow up, turn square and lead an honest life. And always next fall the opening of the horse track, slot machine and roulette season brings in the rakings and scrapings of Broadway and Chicago, swindlers, fancy men, journeymen thieves and ordinary hustlers to hold carnival until the saxophones sob "Home, Sweet Home," in April.

The local statesmen put in the off season calling one another porch-climbers and door-mat thieves in competition for a lot of penny-ante public offices, which don't pay enough in salary to buy their cigarettes. The reading publishers also join the sport and print fearless announcements that crime must go, while a changing group of intermittent blackmail sheets chisel along, printing scurrilous insinuations about people who do nothing about it because they couldn't collect a quarter even if they won in court, in addition to which the scoundrels might haul off and prove all counts to a jury.

* * * *

RIGHT NOW two of the big-shot publishers are engaged in an exchange of insults which in the frontier journalism of Mark Twain's time and place would have called for a settlement with small arms before the ink was dry. But one calls the other a grafter, and that one calls the first one a notorious racketeer, and the public is left to conclude that there might be a grain of truth in both allegations as the merry war wages on. They claim to have some sort of libel law in Florida, but it must be a dead letter, like the laws against graft, because some of the copy would make the foulest aspersions of New York blackmail rags read like fawning flattery.

All this would be harmless but for a streak of shocking cruelty in the community's dealings with down and out people, and occasionally with real bad men who have the misfortune to get caught.

They got a single-handed jewel thief named Henry Sitamore a few years ago and gave him 40 years—which may have served him right. But then he broke jail and gave them quite a chase, and since then he has spent five years in solitary confinement. His attorney is going to court next Monday, not to get him out of prison, but to get him out of solitary on the plea that he is going crazy.

Meantime there have been deals between public officials and the underworld which have outscored the total of Henry Sitamore's thieving a thousand to one, but nobody ever spends an hour in jail for giving or taking graft. I assume that bribery must be rife, because one representative of the slots estimated that the profit on a single season would come to 20 millions.

* * * *

NOW THE SLOTS have been voted out by popular referendum, but if you think there will be no slots in Miami next year you are just being naive.

Henry Sitamore's plight is not likely to wring many hearts, for he is a very low creature, but if that one doesn't touch you I think you might feel at least a twinge of resentment against the so-called Hobo Express, which is a motor truck that carries out hungry and busted men whose only crime is poverty and dumps them over the northern county line every morning in the big season.

You may be sure their crime is no worse than destitution, because they are very tough with independent criminals like Sitamore having no underworld connections. If these men were guilty of anything worse they wouldn't be turned loose on the next county, still broke and facing the horrible prospect of marching through Georgia, where the sheriffs are still more cruel—if that can be.

Yet, while busted, weak and hungry Americans, including a possible few with self-respect, are riding the Hobo Express, the town positively crawls with well-known police characters from big Northern cities, and people seem to think that is all right.

I tell you this is a cockeyed country. There never was anything like it anywhere.

History's Turning Point.

On this day of the year 1775 occurred in the village of Lexington, Mass., the first bloody battle between British and Colonial troops, the opening guns of the war for independence. As a result thousands and thousands of pilgrims come to the quiet and charming little town every year to visit the historic scene.

* * * *

Numbers do not determine the relative importance of events. There were battles in the World War and in other wars where the casualties were enormous, and yet the immediate results were small. In the Battle of Lexington the British losses were 73 killed, 174 wounded and 26 missing. The Colonials had 49 killed, 39 wounded, and five missing.

Thus, from the point of view of numbers, the battle seems nothing more than a skirmish. But it was a turning-point in history, for, as Emerson said in a poem as famous as the event it celebrated, they "fired the shot heard round the world."

It is interesting that Emerson, the man of peace, should have written a poem commemorating bloodshed. But his love of liberty was greater than his hatred of violence.

Courage and resolution were shown by the men on both sides at the Battle of Lexington, and it is pleasant to realize that never have the relations between Great Britain and the United States been more cordial than they are at this moment.

* * * *

And there is this enormous fact common to both British and Americans: they both love individual liberty, and are willing to make sacrifices to maintain and preserve it.

Englishmen of genius have fought for freedom, for on this very day, the nineteenth of April, in the year 1824, Lord Byron died in Greece, and no native of that country is more honored there today than he.

Dead Language?

Scots will be shocked to learn that the idea obtains among scholars in Norway that Gaelic, once the language of half Caledonia, is becoming an archaic form of speech. Savants at the University of Oslo are organizing an expedition which will visit the Highlands and record the variations of Scottish Gaelic while there is yet time.

Gaelic still is spoken by 130,000 of Scotland's population; ten years ago 155,000 used the ancient language of Somerled. In Wales and Ireland the Celtic tongues do not appear to be in danger of disappearing. The Welsh are fiercely and traditionally loyal to their Cymric speech. Ireland's government has stimulated the study of Erse so that now about 17 per cent of the Free State people understand that tongue.

Various cultural movements designed to make Scots conscious of the Gaelic seem to have failed. It is possible that a greater proportion of Scottish-Canadians in Nova Scotia and some sections of Ontario retain the Gaelic than do their fellow Celts in "the old country." At any rate, the Norwegians who make the trip to Scotland, following in the footsteps of sea kings who once ravaged the coasts of the Gael, will not be inclined to gloat.

Locking Stable With No Horse

Cleveland Trust Officer Analyzed Business Outlook.

By Col. Leonard P. Ayres,
Vice-President, Cleveland Trust Co.

A GOOD DEAL of bad economics is being talked in these days about emergency measures to prevent a business, extended controls to check bank credit expansion, and increased Federal powers to restrain commodity price advances. These discussions constitute a kind of locking of the stable door before the family horse has even been acquired. The truth is that we not only have no business boom, but we have not as yet definitely emerged from the depression. The expansion of bank credit loans so far in this recovery period has been nonspeculative in nature, and so moderate in volume as to be almost minute. The exceptionally rapid price advances have been in commodities of international trade.

The present discussions are baneful because they divert our attention and our efforts away from the three economic problems which really are of pressing urgency. These are the reduction of unemployment, the balancing of the Federal budget, and the restoration of harmony in labor relations. Of course we should foster every promising attempt to find out how to minimize business booms and slumps, but equally, of course, we shall ultimately realize that these desired results are to be attained through the patient and persistent application of prudent policies, and not by the sudden adoption of a series of panaceas.

At present our volume of industrial production is about as large as it was just before the depression, but we have now about 7,000,000 more people in the population than we had then, so the per capita output is smaller. Our national income, our railroad freight traffic, and our department store sales are all about 20 per cent lower now than just before the depression. New construction is running about half of what it was 10 years ago.

Employment Lag Reflects Subnormal Business Today.

THE CHIEF REASON why about 15 per cent or more of our workers are idle is that general business, including industry, agriculture, trade and transportation, is still 15 per cent or more below normal. Our greatest present national need is to become currently self-supporting once more, as a Nation, as communities, as families and as individuals. Meanwhile, we should be working out means to remain self-supporting after we become self-supporting. After that we might well worry about how to avoid over-prosperity.

The volume of industrial production made a good advance during March despite the labor troubles, and the serious restriction in the output of automobiles. In December it was only a little more than 5 per cent below normal. Then it fell in January to 10.7 per cent below, and in February it was 9.3 per cent below. The new figures for March are as yet only estimates, but they indicate that the production level was only 4.8 per cent below normal. This is a new high record for the depression, and higher than any monthly figure since February of 1930.

The advance in business activity from January to February presented another of the rather rare instances in which there were no declines among the indicators of business tabulated each month by the Federal Reserve authorities. Manufacturing and mining output both increased. Residential construction advanced, and so did all other construction. Both factory employment and pay rolls moved higher. Freight car loadings remained unchanged, despite the extensive floods, and the value of department store sales increased.

Agricultural prospects appear to be exceptionally bright, with prices high, increased acreages being planted, and promising weather conditions. Except for existing and threatened labor difficulties, and over-rapid commodity price advances, there appear to be at present only two important sets of adverse conditions in the general business situation. One of these consists of the small volume of corporate financing for new capital that is now being done and planned.

The other laggard is new building construction which appears to have made less progress during March than was reasonably to be expected. It may be that there has been some slowing down in new building as a result of recent and widespread increases in the costs of construction. Rents are rsiing but not neraly as rapidly as are building costs which are getting into high levels that in some localities approach those of the recent prosperity period.

No Fear For Recovery Seen In Wholesale Prices.

THE FEAR that the recent sharp advances in wholesale prices may result in calling a halt to business recovery is being frequently expressed in current economic discussions. Probably there is little valid ground for such fears. The price advances are dangerous because they may run too fast and too far, and they may produce increases in the retail prices of the cost of living, but it is not probable that they will result in any serious check in the advance of recovery in the near future.

In the inflationary period in France following the termination of the war, prices rose irregularly and rapidly during most of five consecutive years. This price advance did not check business activity, for the volume of industrial production increased by nearly 60 per cent from 1922 to the summer of 1926. In this country production advanced rapidly soon after the outbreak of war in 1914, and remained at high prosperity levels throughout the war and until the latter part of 1920. Prices advanced a little later and kept on going up until they were more than 150 per cent higher in 1920 than they had been in 1914.

In Germany the great inflation got under way almost as soon as the war was over, and it was accompanied by a sustained period of exceptional industrial activity until the end of 1922.

In Italy the sharp post-war price advance took place mostly in 1920, and the business boom did not get well under way until 1922. After that production increased with sustained vigor into 1925, and toward the end was accompanied by another large price advance. Rising prices are not likely to check recovery in any short period of time, but high-level production is very likely to stimulate runaway prices. When production nears capacity levels further demands result in excessive price advances. The danger is that prosperity may unduly lift prices rather than that high prices may kill off prosperity.

Bank credit inflation is rightly held to have been largely responsible for the speculative excesses in real estate and in the stock market which characterized the last prosperity period. It is natural that now, when we are discussing control measures to avert a commodity price inflation, attention should be directed to the consideration of methods for preventing any excessive expansion of bank credit. Before we carry such discussion very far it would be well to check up on the facts by examining the record of bank credit expansion during the period of the last prosperity and during that of this recovery so far.

Bank Credit Loan Volume During 15 Years Significant.

IN DIAGRAM B the dashed lines show the changes in the volume of bank credit loans from the depression of 1921 to the end of 1936 by all banks that were members of the Federal Reserve System. All the bank loans are divided into their three classes of commercial loans, real estate loans, and security loans, and in each case the average in 1921 is taken as being equal to 100.

The two lines in the top section show that commercial loans increased hardly at all from the depression of 1921 to the peak of prosperity in 1929, although general business activity, which is here represented by national income, advanced by 43 per cent. By contrast in this recovery period commrecial loans are definitely, although tardily, moving upward as general business again advances. The explanation of the difference seems to be that from 1921 to 1929 there was a huge increase in corporate financing by which business secured its needed funds through selling bonds and stocks. In this recovery period there has been little new capital financing, and business is turning instead to the banks for funds as activity expands.

Real estate loans increased rapidly not only up to the peak of prosperity in 1929, but into 1931, and they did this despite the fact that building contracts had begun to decline in volume well before the peak of prosperity was reached. In this recovery there has been a considerable increase in building, but real estate loans are now no larger in volume than they were at the bottom of the depression in 1932 and 1933. It is clear that bank credit expansion financed the building boom of the last prosperity period, and that it is not financing in any large degree the present recovery in building.

In the bottom section of diagram B the solid line represents the changes in the total market values of all the stocks and bonds of American corporations listed on the New York Stock Exchange. These market values had an enormous increase from 1921 to 1929, and there was an accompanying large increase in the security loans of member banks. By contrast we are now having another great bull market in security values, but this time it is not accompanied by any such advance in security loans of banks. These loans are now much smaller than they were at the bottom of the depression. Clearly this bull market is not being financed by bank credit expansion.

The explanation of the present advances in real estate activity and in stock market activity without any important increase in the corresponding bank loans is to be found in the results of the deficit financing of the Federal Government. The huge Government borrowing has brought into existence an enormous increase in money which exists largely in the form of demand deposits in the banks. These deposits can be spent as their owners please, and they are beyond control through any such measures as rediscount rates or reserve requirements. The funds that are financing the bull market, and the building activity, and the business recovery, largely consist of Government credit that has already been converted into money.

Fluctuations In Durable Goods Production Important.

THE PRESIDENT discussed highly important economic problems when he talked to the newspaper men at his press conference of April 2 about durable goods and nondurable goods. Perhaps it would not be going too far to say that he was touching upon the most important of all economic questions, for the problem of the wide fluctuations which characterize the production of durable goods is the key problem of business cycles, and so the essence of the problem of our recurring waves of unemployment.

The two lines in diagram A show the annual changes in the per capita volume of production of durable goods and non-durable goods over the 39-year period which the President discussed. The data are annual averages except those for 1937, which are the figures for February. The average for 1901-1930 is taken as being equal to 100. The durable goods represented by the solid line are those made of the lasting materials, such as the metals, lumber, stone, clay, glass, cement and the like. The non-durable goods represented by the dashed line are those that are shorter lived, such as foods, textiles, paper, leather, rubber, tobacco and gasoline.

The fluctuations in the output of the non-durable goods have been relatively moderate, even in this great depression. If all industrial output made as even progress over the years as that the non-durable goods ordinarily does, we should have no serious problems of booms, depressions and unemployment. The reason for this fairly even production is that in the main we use up these goods or wear them out relatively soon and must replace them. The purchases of non-durable goods are mostly obligatory.

The case of the durable goods is entirely different. Because they are durable the purchases of them can be postponed. We must constantly buy gasoline, but we can put off buying a new car. The man who smokes must buy tobacco, but he can postpone buying a new pipe. Fuel must be bought for the stove, and food to be cooked by it, but buying a new stove can be long delayed. Purchases of durable goods are mostly optional.

The President notes with some alarm that the volume of durable goods production is now rising more rapidly than that of non-durable goods, and diagram A shows that this is so. It is always true that durable goods production is either rising faster or falling faster than that of non-durable goods, simply because the fluctuations are wider. The far more important fact is that the production of both sorts of goods is now subnormal, as the diagram clearly shows. We need more of both to restore our national standards of living and to provide employment for idle workers. Whether one can be lifted without the other is highly doubtful. Another fact is that in this recovery the prices of non-durable goods have risen far further and faster than those of durable goods, contrary to prevailing assumptions.

Farm Quarrels

An Editorial From
The Atlantic (Ia.) News-Telegraph

Farm Bloc At Low Ebb.

NEWS DISPATCHES chronicle that discord in the United States farm bloc has so weakened the farm movement that, according to observers, it is at the lowest ebb in nearly a decade. The force which got behind the farm cause under pressure of emergency seems to have been lessened, now that the emergency is over.

Richard Wilson, Des Moines Register's Washington correspondent, lists four factors which, he says, reveal the weakness of the movement. First of these is the dispute in the committee on agriculture on a farm tenancy program; second is the disagreement among farm organizations over methods of production control; third is the division among all organized farm groups on the President's plan to reorganize the Supreme Court, and fourth, the absence of a single leader, outside of the Government, who is in full accord with all New Deal farm measures.

MR. WILSON also remarks, and it must be obvious, that in addition to these specific factors the one thing which is perhaps more largely responsible for the weakness of the farm cause at the present time is the lethargy which is the inevitable result of high prices, even though they are largely because of low supplies. When farm prices are high, the farmers, being only human, are like all the rest of us in that they are prone to lose sight of the necessity for action. We are all inclined to discharge the pilot when we have safely passed the breakers. But this is a short-sighted policy.

The News-Telegraph has regretted at all times that the farm question became the football of partisan politics, and has taken the view that the movement had no political connection and should have been kept free from political bickerings. In the farm section of the country, which is the section in which we live, the prosperity of agriculture is of paramount concern to all of us. We are all farmers in a sense. When agriculture is prosperous all the rest are prosperous, and when it is in the doldrums all the rest of us are that way. There is no way to escape the connection between the general prosperity of the farm belt and the prosperity of the individual farmer.

THE PROBLEM is one which should be handled intelligently over a long period of years. Farmers, and those who espouse their cause, who are moved to inactivity by spasmodic and periodic high-price eras, occasioned largely by lower supplies, should use their heads and reflect that it is not for today or next week or next year that there must be a farm program, but for all time. Agriculture should have its price structure stabilized by some workable and sensible program for the long pull. It means nothing to the prosperity of the farmer when prices are high and his supplies are low. High prices mean nothing to the man who hasn't much to sell.

It is not to the interest of the farmer either, or to the rest of us, to have prices reach inordinate levels because of low supplies, and then take a nose dive when supplies are normal. The thing at which all farm programs should aim is the maintenance of agricultural prices at a fair level, which those who buy food products can pay, which represent a profit to the farmer and which are comparable to the prices of other commodities.

* * * *

THOSE WHO ESPOUSE the farmer's cause above all things cannot afford to quarrel among themselves. They need not think their battle is won. From the very nature of the farmer's calling, the fact he deals in an unprocessed product and has to buy processed products, he will always battle a disparity between the price he pays and the price he receives. The object of all farm plans is to as far as possible equalize this disparity and stabilize the farmer's price at a level which means a decent profit and decent living conditions for those who follow the profession of agriculture.

Farm supporters should be able to unite on a program for agriculture, independent of what views they may hold on other public questions. The important thing for them to remember is that in union there is strength. Divided, they will get nowhere and all the ground they have gained can be speedily lost.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Good Morning! Are You in Interstate Commerce?

Anything may be in interstate commerce now, including your old gray vest, mother's ball of yarn, daddy's golf clubs and Aunt Minnie's snuffbox.

* * * *

There was a time when interstate commerce was pretty exclusive. Only the railroads and steamship lines could get in.

* * * *

A pickle-packing business, a news agency, a shoemaker or an artificial flower maker would be blackballed before he could even get his application in.

* * * *

But time marches on and nothing that was so yesterday is necessarily true today. Consult your daily paper for more intimate details.

* * * *

Even a two-piece suit with an extra pair of pants (or without) is linked up with interstate commerce today.

* * * *

It's all due to those latest Supreme Court decisions, which would seem to indicate that the high court has become so revitalized that it makes Roosevelt look like an old-fashioned man.

* * * *

The court is still handing down five-to-four decisions, but it is using the five-men-forward-four-men-back formation.

* * * *

There was an unconfirmed rumor today that Chief Justice Hughes was about to recommend that Congress pass a bill to give the President a few young assistants.

* * * *

* * * *

Anything that flows into interstate commerce is now subject to the powers exercised over interstate commerce. The Associated Press is now the same as a railroad except that it needn't whistle at crossings, or be tapped with monkey wrenches at terminals to see if it has a hot box.

* * * *

A war dispatch, a divorce item or the report of a murder trial is just the same as a carload of new potatoes, a shipment of dried herring or a load of door knobs.

* * * *

In the trailer suit, the trailer business was so new that most of the justices had to be told what it was. This put them ahead of the owners, most of whom are still trying to find out.

* * * *

It seems trailers are a part of interstate commerce, too. Just something in which vacations are delivered pre-packed and with a sign "Use No Hooks" stamped plainly on the back of the driver and his wife.

* * * *

But it was the decision in the Friedman-Harry Marks Clothing Co. that surprised the public. The people were inclined to accept the old-fashioned idea that even if the work of a pants cutter in Pawtucket, R. I., ultimately turned up on a man in Lincoln, Nebr., the pants cutter was still a pants cutter, and not a branch of interstate commerce.

* * * *

Who ever thought we'd see the day when a blue suit with patch pockets would be a bosom pal of the 8:10 freight train, the birthday greeting card and a ton of steel rails?

Boylan Board Has Sole Right To Pick Jefferson Shrine Site

All Other Memorial Commissions Required To Get Congressional Approval; Funds For Building Could Be Held Up.

Herewith is the ninth of a series of articles discussing the controversy raging over plans to build a memorial to Thomas Jefferson at the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park.

By Gerald G. Gross

The Congressional commission that built the Lincoln Memorial was required to submit to Congress the site of its choice and await that body's approval before proceeding with construction.

In fact, none of the buildings which now occupy four of the five "cardinal points" of the L'Enfant plan was erected until Congress first had passed favorably upon the proposed site.

These four are the Capitol, the White House, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial. Representative John J. Boylan, chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, has repeatedly emphasized that situation of the memorial at the Tidal Basin is desirable because it would complete the L'Enfant cross.

Yet the bill which Boylan succeeded in getting through Congress last year gave his commission absolute powers over the site. A majority vote in House and Senate may have been necessary to confirm the suggested locations of the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial, but H. R. 12027 saw to it that Congress would not have to bother to approve the Jefferson commission's selection.

The Congressional commission, recently appointed, which is casting about for available sites on which to build a District audtiorium must have its final selection approved by majority vote of both Houses before that project can move forward.

It is a certainty that when, and if, the Capital gets a new municipal airport the site will have received the official blessing of Congress before the first spadeful of earth is turned.

Either by specifying the site in the authorizing legislation or reserving the right to pass upon the recommendations of an inferior agency, Congress has directly given its assent to the location of practically every one of the scores of memorials and monuments now standing in the National Capital, from the Samuel Gompers statue on Massachusetts avenue to the First and Second Division Memorials south of the White House.

In the majority of instances, the legislation has provided that location and design must bear the approval of the Fine Arts Commission.

H. R. 12027, however, was allowed to get through Congress and past the President's signature intact in its verbiage that the Boylan commission shall have the final word on both location and design and that it might "avail itself of the assistance and advice of the Commission of Fine Arts," but it did not have to.

If public sentiment favored placement of the memorial at, for example, the foot of East Capitol street—well, public sentiment was out of luck if the commission did not see it the same way.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who happens to be a member of the 12-man group headed by Boylan, was and still is in favor of the Anacostia site, which has many supporters. But the commission has the last word and all it needs to start the steam shovels going where the Japanese cherry trees stand in West Potomac Park is an appropriation.

There are backers, too, of the plan to build a memorial to Jefferson in the Mall, the alternative espoused by two other members of the commission, Senators Charles L. McNary and Augustine Lonergan.

Then there are those who argue the availability of Lincoln Park in East Capitol street, the handsome northern terminus of Sixteenth street, where the memorial would stand facing the White House and the scenic spot along the Rock Creek and Potomac parkway near P street which Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, once planned to utilize for a municipal auditorium.

Historic Jones Point on the Potomac, where the first cornerstone was laid in 1791 for Washington, the National Capital, also is urged because it is Federally owned, is located amid matchless scenery and is convenient to the pilgrims to Mount Vernon who use the memorial highway.

But Mr. Boylan has decided that the Nation's architectural tribute to one of the greatest and most revered sons shall be raised on a spot which, as another member of Congress has pointed out, already is an international memorial of goodwill.

If anyone else has a different opinion, he must check it at the door. For nothing, apparently, can interfere with the commisison chairman's intentions, unless Congress chooses to reopen the program by withholding the requested appropriation and then amending H. R. 12027.

Richard Himber's Music Is Banned By Hitler's Order

The German government has placed a ban on all recorded music by Richard Himber, New York orchestra leader, because of Himber's dislike for martial music, the National Council for Prevention of War reported here yesterday.

The council repeated a story from Ruby Newman, New York band leader and friend of Himber, who said several Himber discs were taken from her portable phonograph and destroyed when she entered Germany recently. She said the guard explained that Hitler had banned all Himber records in Germany because of his stand against martial music.

Himber made a Nation-wide appeal last week to all other orchestra conductors in the United States asking them not to play martial airs. He declared that military music is "savage rhythm" and can stir the emotions of peace-loving people to a point of war-like frenzy.

Sibley Asks Cut InCorporationTax

By the Associated Press.

Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, asked Congress yesterday to eliminate "inequities and hardships" in the surtax on undistributed corporation surpluses.

In letters to the House Ways and Means Committee, the Senate Finance Committee and the House and Senate Appropriations committees, Sibley said:

"We are not unaware of the Paramount importance of obtaining a balance of the Federal budget. It seems to us, however, that a very moderate lowering of the scale of Federal expenditures would permit such changes in the corporate surtax as would avoid the present consequences."

Arrival of First Ship In Japan Celebrated

Shimoda, Japan, April 18 (AP).—Japanese villagers, wearing quaint costumes which they conceived to be American garb of the 1850s, paraded the streets of this little seacoast town today in commemoration of the arrival here 84 years ago of an American squadron under Commodore Matthew C. Perry.

Ambassador Joseph C. Grew presided over ceremonies marking Shimoda's annual "Black Ship Festival," so called because of the name—"black ships"—which the Japanese of 1853 applied to Commodore Perry's men o' war, which came to open Japan to intercourse with the Western World after more than two centuries of seclusion.

Many in Diplomatic Set Have Taken New Homes

Counselor of Cuban Embassy, Mexican Military Attache and Wives Are Among Those Making Moves.

Spring seems to be a very restless time for Washingtonians. If they are not busily engaged in the packing away of heavy winter draperies and rugs and bringing wicker furniture and garden sets from their hiding places, then they are more than likely making plans for the seashore or mountains. However, the diplomatic set—those who have been here for a time—has taken this particular time to change places of abode, while newcomers have been engaged in the intricacies of house hunting.

The new Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Valdez Rodriguez are now at home in the house at 1636 Kenyon street, which they recently leased. The Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Amezcua, who have been residing at the Roosevelt Hotel ever since their arrival in Washington, have given up their apartment and moved to the house at 3804 Yuma street.

Apartments seem very popular with the members of the embassy and legation staffs, especially so with the young bachelors. Senor Don Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, of the Argentine Embassy, has taken one in the Anchorage, right around the corner from his embassy, and the new First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Senor Don Manuel Pereira, is keeping bachelor house at 2154 Florida avenue.

The Secretary of the Latvian Legation and Mme. Smits, who purchased a home out in Silver Spring shortly after their arrival here last year, have moved, this time closer to town and are in the house at 207 East Underwood street, Chevy Chase, Md., for the spring and summer.

The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Senor A. Teixeira Soares, who has been making his home at Wardman Park, has moved to 2939 Newark street, to remain during the absence of Senhora de Teixeira Soares, who has left for a visit to their home.

The new Assistant Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Fayet, who have just arrived in the Capital, are temporarily staying at the embassy while hunting for a permanent home.

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close will leave Washington Wednesday for New York and will sail the following day for England, where they will attend the coronation and remain for several months.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who is sailing soon for England, will be hostess at a large dinner party tomorrow evening in the Sert room of the Waldorf Astoria in New York City.

The Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley, will come to Washington today to attend the opening baseball game.

Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of Senator Overton, of Louisiana, who makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel, has issued invitations for a tea to be given in her apartment tomorrow from 4:30 to 6:30, in honor of the Louisiana delegation to the D. A. R.

The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, Capt. Mark-Wardlaw will sail Wednesday for England to join Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw and their daughter, Miss Eve Mark-Wardlaw. He will remain abroad several months.

Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his aide-de-camp, Capt. Thomas J. Davis, are at the Astor Hotel during their stay in New York City.

Mrs. William Howard Taft is at the Villa Marguerita in Charleston, S. C., where she will remain until Thursday before coming to Washington. She has recently returned from a Mediterranean cruise.

Mack, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuneberti, Mr. Charles Mason Remey and his sister, Miss Angelica Remey, Representative Ralph Owen Brewster, who has just returned from Maine, where he flew to be present at the cornerstone laying of a postoffice; Mrs. Brewster, Frau von Boetticher, Mrs. Norman Murray Smith, Mrs. Edwin Flather, Dr. and Mrs. Pedro Arcaya, Capt. and Mrs. Fortunato Porroto, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sim Lee, Mrs. Thomas W. THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

What a party—never in all of our life have we seen anything that could even hold a candle to the dance which the Nikola Perazics gave Saturday evening in their Georgetown home. It was really something to go down in social history.

To begin at the beginning we shall resort to whirlographs in attempting to repaint the gala evening.

So-oooo-o-o——alighting from our motor at the curb we were greeted by Wililam, who is the official welcomer at all of THE parties in this town——

Then up and up the many stone steps, along the flagged terrace, pausing for a moment to enjoy the sheer beauty of the night—the winking stars overhead, the city and its myriad lights laid out at our feet, and down in the lower garden past the pool, the huge bonfire where lamb was in the process of being barbecued——

Inside the great house, along the entrance hall to the dressing room where we shed our wraps and there saw a large white box containing countless soft, chiffon handkerchiefs of all colors, for the ladies—what a very nice and novel idea, and how pretty it was, the feminine guests going about with matching or contrasting whisps of the sheer material floating from the dainty little wristlets——

On into the ballroom where Mme. Perazic, lovely and charming in a gold lace gown, with which she trailed a kerchief of scarlet chiffon—and her perfect host of a husband greeting everyone——

The ballroom was all dolled up for the occasion most effectively—great clusters of varicolored balloons looking ever so much like gigantic bunches of grapes, were suspended from the ceiling, while along the sides, necklacing the stately columns, were single lines of the balloons—these not only provided colorful scenery, but gave a few noise-desiring souls something to do in the way of popping the air-filled pheres with a quick touch of a cigarette tip, or a nimble step on one that had escaped and was lazying about the dance floor between couples——

Like everyone else we, too, explored the handsome house, and thinking how like a magazine picture the rooms upstairs were when a shrill little growl and bark coming from beneath a satin upholstered chair made known the presence of a watchful Pekinese——

In the dining room a banquet fit for kings was awaiting the guests, including all sorts of salads, cold meats, vegetables, the barbecued lamb, which was so delicious——

Prew and Lyla Savoy having the time of their lives playing with the bubble balloons——

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Castillo Najera, sitting back on one of the deep Turkish couches, while his wife, wearing shell-pink chiffon, danced by——

That tall good looking couple, the Marshall Orme Exnicioses, she in a vivid printed frock——

Stellita Stapleton, in black, showing much concern over the cigarette someone had tossed into one of the huge urns, fearing it and the electric light bulb inside the huge vase might not get on well, thoughtfully disconnecting the wire until the last spark of tobacco was quite out——

And on and on through the speeding hours, the guests dancing, dining, sitting back and watching their companions, or strolling out onto the terrace and down the steps to get a closer look at the barbecue and its cheery fire—very few leaving for home until there were hints of gray streaking the eastern sky and now and then sleepy chirpings of birds.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Old Sweetheart Turns Up to Threaten Happiness of Engaged Couple; Girl Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the past three years I have been going with a young man whom I met in college and for about six months now we had been planning to get married in the near future. We are both 24 years of age. When I first met him he told me he had been engaged to a girl while in high school, but had been forced to break the engagement when he was about 20 because the young lady, although professing to be very much in love with him, repeatedly and deliberately lied to him about dates with other young men.

After I had been going with him for about a year he told me that she had come to him and told him she still loved him. He told me that he believed me to be a much finer girl in every way and that he knew he could be happier with me, but that she seemed to have some attraction for him which he could not resist. He went away by himself to think things over and when he returned he began coming to see me again and made it clear that he had decided to give her up.

* * * *

When, later, he asked me to marry him I talked quite frankly with him about the previous affair because I felt that perhaps he was still in love with her without being aware of it himself. But he said it was absolutely over. Unfortunately, this young lady had no feminine reticence or what I consider a sense of fair play. He said that he was continually getting letters from her to the effect that he belonged to her and that she had no intention of giving him up. He said, however, that they had no effect on him because he considered that she wanted him only because she couldn't get him. He says she has given no evidence that she would ever be true to him if he did go back to her.

* * * *

For many months we were very happy together. He repeatedly told me that he loved me, said that he had never been so happy before, or felt the same way about anyone else, and was anxious to marry me as soon as he could. But during the past month I noticed a change in his attitude. He semed very worried and when I would ask him what was the matter he would say that he couldn't tell me at present.

* * * *

Last night I learned that about a month ago the young lady managed to arrange to take him home from church and on the way told him that she still loved him and had every intention of marrying him. He says he told her he could never marry her, but she seems to realize the power she has over him. She asked him what he would do if he married me and then she came and tried to get him away from me. He says frankly he doesn't know what would happen in that case, but that he doesn't feel it would be fair to marry me or anyone else until he can be sure that he is entirely free of her attraction for him.

* * * *

During the past four years he has been with her only a few times, but he says he often has romantic dreams about her. He says that he loves me and that he believes what he feels for me is love in the best sense of the word. He has tried rationally to analyze the situation and he says that it is out of the question for him ever to marry her. He says if she would leave him alone he could marry me and be very happy, but as long as he has to live where she can reach him, I am afraid she will never leave him alone. He considers me intelligent and has asked me to please help him work out a solution.

* * * *

I still love him and believe that the affection he feels for me is of a more lasting sort. I have suggested to him that it would be better for us not to see each other for a time. Do you think this is a good idea? Or should I break with him completely? He says the young lady does not appeal to him when he thinks of her in a rational manner, but when she tells him that she loves him he gets a tight feeling in the throat and feels actually powerless. She is considered attractive and intelligent, but he says she is wholly selfish, conceited and emotionally unstable. Do you think what he feels for her can be love, when he says that he actually dislikes her? What chance has he ever to free himself of her influence? He seems sincerely to wish to do this.

* * * *

I shall appreciate it so much if you can help me as I do not feel that my experience has been wide enough to help me to deal with the situation. I have the utmost faith in your judgment and am sure that you can give me some constructive suggestions. I feel that I cannot give him up, but if that seems to be the only solution I shall quietly step out of the picture and let him go his way. Very truly yours.

BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Your fiance is entirely right in supposing the young lady wants him now because she isn't entirely sure she can have him. The power she exerts over him is easy to analyze and, once understood, should be rather easily shaken off. It is maliciously employed physical magnetism—nothing more. If he were married to a woman he truly loved—as he loves you, for instance—with whom he could achieve that profound psychic peace and poise which comes of a complementary physical adjustment in marriage, he would see the girl as the cheaply provocative creature she is.

* * * *

It would appear that your fiance is an idealistic, straightforward, somewhat naive young man who is confronted, in the person of this girl, with his first unscrupulous adversary in the game of romance. Wholly unversed in the ways of such women—who play with a man's devotion as a cat plays with a mouse—he is falling reluctant prey not only to the girl's self confidently exercised, tantalizingly familiar physical allure (which he mistakenly supposes to be some indecipherable sorcery), but to her malice-inspired and miserable slave. As he says, "she is wholly selfish, conceited and emotionally unstable."

* * * *

It has become a point of pride with her that he shall not escape her enslaving toils. The power to give and receive happiness, to share love equally with another, is not possessed by such beings. This girl is fighting to keep this man chained to her chariot wheels merely as a human sacrifice to her own festered ego. She doesn't want either him or his love as such, but only as continuous proof that her particular brand of charm is irresistible when and if she chooses to wield it.

* * * *

No man worthy of the name, possessed of any pride, integrity or intelligence, would permit his chances of genuine happiness to be ground into the dust by such a woman. And the girl with whom he has found real love should come to his assistance along all fronts to resist his exploitation by such a creature. I advise you and your fiance to marry as quickly as possible. And I advise him, in the meantime, to avoid the girl's society as deliberately, consistently and with as little apology as he would that of a rattlesnake. If she continues to write to him, I suggest he return her letters unopened. If she throws herself in his pathway and begs to talk with him, he should turn on his heel and walk away.

* * * *

If your fiance will not pledge himself to such a course of action and keep to it, he is not worth saving. No power on heaven or earth can make a towering oak out of a weeping willow tree. But if he subscribes to it, give him your full protection, sympathy and co-operation, and don't ask him to go away from your side for further, lonely, confused wrestling with the problem.

Unmasked by the tactics I have prescribed above, the girl will prove to be just about as dangerous as the ghost who, courageously confronted, turns out to be a small boy dressed in a sheet.

* * * *

Incidentally, your fiance need not suppose that his frequent romantic dreams about the other girl mean she is the great love and femme fatale of his life. I should say, rather, that they mean he is emotionally unsatisfied. This girl, to whom he first gave his heart and who consistently denied him reassurance of dependable devotion, stalks through his dreams as a symbol of emotional frustration. When he has achieved, in marriage, a human relationship of love fully expressed and reciprocated that ghost will walk no more.

Your Summer Hat—It May Be Sophisticated or Romantic

The navy pancake beret, below, of rough straw accented with a padded roll edge of white grosgrain is suitable to accompany both summer frocks and suits. Designed by G. Howard Hodge. At right, the leghorn straw profile hat in green with romantic streamers in self color chiffon emphasizes the current youthfuul styling. May be worn with printed costumes and silk suits. Designed by Della Donne. Both hats were shown at the Millinery Creator's Guild Preview of Summer Fashions held recently in New York.

Three General Classifications Adopted for Summer Hats

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

HATS FOR SUMMER will fall into three general classifications; those stressing the romantic revival, the easy-to-wear hat (for all daytime occasions) and the type of headgear known as spectator sports. With the current diversity in styling, materials and color themes, this summer will be marked as a time when every woman will be able to find not only one, but an entire wardrobe of hats that really are becoming.

In the romantic revival, there is definite proof of the influence of the recent costume pictures. Hats of this type provide an excellent means of escape from the world of today, and by a flight of the imagination, one may leap from period to period, being Mme. Bovary, a belle of the gay 90's and on and on, at will. There should be at least one romantic hat in every well-planned wardrobe; this type of hat demands clothes in the same theme.

The "easy-to-wear hats" were designed in defiance of the many silly hats of the past season, which almost every woman found not only difficult but almost impossible to wear. Hats in this category are simple, ultrasmart and versatile; they were created to serve for many occasions, but are not considered occasional or casual hats. The wearer is absolutely herself in a hat in this classification, she is not trying to be romantic when donning this type of headgear. It is also the type of a hat her husband would select, if brought along for advice when purchasing a new topping for her summer costume.

Spectator sports hats, which cover a wide range, are included in the third general classification. They are ideal hats for vacation wardrobes, for travel, sightseeing, resort wear, the country club, informal evening. Three new colors sponsored by the Millinery Creator's Guild inspired by the name of a new perfume, Country Club, are called, "country club green, country club brown and country club burnt wheat." These country club versions were designed to cover hat needs from Friday to Monday, when weekending in the country or summer resort.

All hats for summer are discreetly trimmed with flowers, bandings and scarfs, which are an intricate part of the hat itself and not just added at random. Crowns are low and usually split to expose the top of the coiffure; many hats have flowers effectively massed atop, in lieu of a crown. Streamers which tie under the chin or hang down the back are everywhere on hats of all classifications. Calots (skull caps) are extremely important in the summer hat picture—from strictly sports versions to dressy afternoon affairs. Calots with removable brims, giving two hats in one, are a grand acquisition to the summer wardrobe; usually the calot is made of silk or cotton material and the brim, of straw. Incidentally, either the calot or the wide brim may be worn separately.

Light, dark and bright hats are all sponsored by stylists to accompany summer costumes, and you may either match or contrast your hat color with your frock or suit. Straws include leghorn, milan, ballibuntl, barn yard straws, and numerous new novelty versions. Shapes vary from the tiny calot and medium-brimmed hats, to huge cartwheel affairs; it is a summer when the size of your hat is no criterion of style trends.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Food Fads.

"If the deductions of many food faddists accepted as facts were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race has survived," says a bulletin from the Department of Agriculture.

I am told that the book on the "Hay Diet" is one of the best sellers in England, so the United States is not alone in its fondness for food fads, but more food notions flourish in the United States than in any other civilized country.

It is very easy to gull a public which remains profoundly ignorant of the most elementary facts of the science of nutrition. With a little smattering of physiology and chemistry, the food enthusiast can twist things to suit his purpose and create a system which thousands of people will follow blindly. Certain commercial manufacturers of vitamins are not entirely without blame in creating this atmosphere.

Drug Fads Harmful.

Food fads probably do less harm than drug fads, but sometimes by badly balanced diets they can create states of malnutrition. The greatest single bugaboo of the food faddist is meat. Upon meat has been heaped the blame for almost all the diseases of mankind.

Quite as silly as the no-meat fad itself is the scheme for separating starches and proteins—that is, vegetables and meats— and eating one class at separate meals. The digestive system is perfectly capable of taking care of both kinds of food at the same time. Nearly any kind of meat is digestible. The prejudice, for instance, against pork, on the grounds of digestibility, has been scouted by Ralph Hoagland, biochemist of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture.

Meats Digestible.

Meats, he says are among the most digestible of human food products. Pork compares favorably with other meats in the quality. In comparative tests pork was digested in the stomach slightly more rapidly than turkey, in the same time as chicken, and slightly more slowly than beef or lamb.

Meats are esteemed in some places for reducing purposes. One of the most eminent nutritional authorities in the United States, Dr. E. V. McCollum, of Johns Hopkins University, includes lean beef, lean ham, hamburger steak, and even a bit of bacon in his list of recommendations for reducing menus.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

In the Doctor's Office.

". . . and then I tried Dr. Nix—you know what a reputation he's got—and then Dr. Zink, the big specialist; well, he treated me for a year, and then I went through the Harpo Clinic, but I'm telling you I never knew what it was to have a well day until Dr. Bloke put me on this pulverized diet."

"Isn't he marvelous! He gave me a wonderful diet, too. I can have everything I want except meat, vegetables and fruit—"

"So can I!"

"Just as long as it's pulverized."

"So can I; only I can have persimmon juice, too."

"So can I; and he gave a perfectly marvelous medicine to take 7 minutes before breakfast."

"Yes."

"I bet it's EXACTLY the same thing I'm taking. And then I have some little orange pills to take before cocktails."

"So have I. Say, I bet you've got EXACTLY the same thing I've got. Do you ever feel like you don't want to get up in the mornings?"

"Absolutely; and say, do you ever get nervous?"

"Oh I'm terribly nervous. The least little thing upsets me. And you know sometimes I have a funny pain in my arches. Do you ever have that?"

"I haven't a strong stomach either; Dr. Bloke says I need to relax more."

"That's JUST what he told me. Say, did you know Edythe Flitter was going to a perfectly marvelous man for nervous indigestion. He's having her collect hairpins. He says it's all in getting your mind off yourself."

"Well, I don't take any stock in that. I never think of myself, and look at my stomach! Anyway, I'd put Dr. Bloke up against any specialist in the country."

"That's just what I was telling Marie Jinks. She's so crazy about this big liver man she's going to over in Baltimore. She says there's only two men in the country who know anything about the liver and he's one of them."

"My liver hasn't been strong since my last operation. Say, did you know Vi Trotter was going to have another operation?"

"Why, she's just had her appendix—"

"Who's she having, Dr. Blade?"

"No, she's got a new surgeon. A perfectly wonderful man. People come here from Chicago to have him take things out."

"Well, Dr. Blade did a wonderful job on me. I was in a terrible condition. He said it was a miracle I didn't lose my mind. Say, is Lucy Gooch any better?"

"My dear, you wouldn't know her; she's going to a new doctor now—a Dr. Whale. They say he's really one of the biggest men in medicine. He's so hard to see that people have to sit all day in his office—they even bring their lunches."

"You don't mean it."

"Yes, and they say he's terribly particular about who he takes—he just won't take anybody."

"How did Lucy find him?"

"A friend of hers, a Mrs. Zany, told her about him. He just brought this Mrs. Zany back from the grave. And he's simply made a new woman out of Lucy. And inside of two months!"

"Well, I've been going to Dr. Bloke six months. Of course, I think he's a wonderful doctor, but you know—well, I don't think any doctor's ever really found out what was the matter with me."

"Me either. You know what I think—I think the trouble with me is that I've never had the right diagnosis."

"That's my trouble exactly! Say, where did you say this Dr. Bloke was located?"

Introductions Are Easy

Do you play your part as easily and graciously as Betty, who's admired for her smooth manners?

She says the names clearly, "Miss James, this is Mr. Keen. He's the coach at Newton High. You have friends in Newton, don't you, Alice? Perhaps you know some of the same people." There! She's given them loads to talk about.

She'd never introduce them parrot style—"Miss James, Mr. Keen; Mr. Keen, Miss James"—and leave them to flounder helplessly for something to say. Nor would she mention Mr. Keen's name first—and so mistakenly present the girl to the man.

Betty's never flustered because she knows the code. She presents men and boys to women and girls. Young men to older men. Young women to older women.

She knows that at first meetings you say, "How do you do?" not "Pleased to meetcha." That men and younger women rise when presented to an older woman.

When leaving some one you've just met, simply say, "Good-by, Mr. Bird." If you've enjoyed a chat with a new woman acquaintance you might add, "I'm glad to have met you," or "I hope to see you again soon." If you're talking with a man, it's his place to say this, and yours to say, "Thank you. I'm glad to have met you, too."

Avoid embarrassments that often spoil good times at theater, dances, dinners, parties of all kinds. Our 40-page booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR EVERY DAY, tells what to do and say. Have the poise and good manners that make you admired wherever you go.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, Etiquette for Every Day, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Fashion Wave In Modernizing Includes Home

Present Trend Indicates Future to See Few Old-Type Places.

THE HOME has gone in for modernizing just as much as every other department of life. Because of the quest for style, the prediction is made that in the very near future there will be no such thing as an old-fashioned home. Though once mother and grandmother were content to keep the surroundings of their homes just as they had been for years, in order to maintain the furniture and draperies intact, today the home has become rejuvenated. It has had its face lifted, and instead of somber, conventional colors in coverings, we now find patterns that are gay. The atmosphere seems to say, "Come in and enjoy life."

Some homekepers used to discard old furniture for one of two reasons. If the coverings were worn and it was not possible to match the materials, out went the pieces. If style angles became too acute, furniture that possibly ran into big sums of money was either sold or carried to an ash heap. Now textile designers have created pieces that will snap up the interior of homes without waste. The heavy mahogany pieces that grandfather gave his bride now step out in modern adaptations of Jacobean or Queen Anne periods and in shades that give one a lift when entering a room.

Modernistic and floral designs are now used for drapes and coverings, and what ensembles they make! The dark background stain of the heavy furniture frames is lightened by this new material.

The rough open weaves of curtain have been refined to a degree. Glass curtains have been developed to complement these new heavy type drapes. Outline cluny panels will soften the dark lines of lead glass windows while revealing the framework effectively. If you want to modernize a bay window, the bulgy effect can be relieved by panels on each window. Panels follow the line of the bay while overdrapes of a heavy weave in a spun rayon hold the group together.

As each drapery or covering material becomes obsolete it becomes increasingly interesting to note how you can mix your modern with good taste. Net curtains and flowery overdrapes for the modern bedroom impart a restful atmosphere. Nu-cord curtains with floral pattern drapes give one the comfortable secureness of having a sense of the fitness of things. Hung from ceiling to floor, these curtains not alone veil a window pleasingly, but also soften the severity of furniture.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 18.

ALICE HUGHES.

WELL, a very shiny group of our young girlhood has just been badly shown up, and the flag over the Junior League clubhouse should wilt at half-staff. This great civic tragedy took place at no less vital and world-shaking a function than the Rainbow Room shindig which followed the visit of the Harvard Hasty Pudding Club show to our fair to middling city.

Each year the Cambridge lads come down, with their blond wigs and lumpy legs, and their cunning little show, and afterward they and many a beauteous maiden shake a shoe at Jack Rockefeller's place, 70 flights straight up. The affair was noted, this year, by the lackadaisical attitude of our own girls and the sprightly and wide-eyed fervor of the visiting beauties. I was shocked practically out of my black-net number to see the Park Avenue prides sitting about yawning, while such junior peaches as Jane Valentine, of Chicago; Irene Denham, of Savannah, and Doris Foote, of Boston, sparkled and fluttered and seemed to be having the most gala time of their young lives.

It's no wonder, I realized, that so many of Gotham's best "catches" are caught on the fly by the verve and enthusiasm of pretty visitors—and our girls continue to eat their heads off at Papa's table when they should be presiding at their own. I noted three of them actually looking at the swirling dance floors through lorgnettes. If I'd been one of the college lads I'd have spanked them with their own handle-glasses! Such didoes for the infant class! Again we take shame! Of all the affectations of extreme youth, there's none harder to bear than assumed boredom while music plays!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Oh, the Avenue these days! Its sunny excitement and beauty simply knocked every nervous cynicism about my adopted town right out of my skull! And Central Park's growing definitely green. If you'll hurry over, I'll show you a real tree, with young leaves on it! Imagine! . . . And the annual town clean-up is in full swing—even frowsy, littered Broadway is getting a good reddING-up. For nearly one month a year New York is acutely conscious of its rubbish. I'm even careful with my cellophane in April! . . .

* * * *

I learn that "Little Old Lady," from "The Show Is On," has finally flown to well-deserved popularity from coast to coast. I only wish you could see it as so beautifully staged at the Winter Garden by Vincente Minnelli—sung and danced with infinite charm by Mitzi Mayfair and her handsome partner—and pretty chorus girls in soft, blue, old-fashioned dresses and wearing gray wigs and gold-rimmed specs! It's unusual and very lovely. . . .

* * * *

Like Jack Chapman's little yarn about Mr. Welcome, an 80-year-old fiddler from Vermont who came here to entertain at a big party, bringing two fellow-musicians. Jack asked how he managed his associates. "Well," said Mr. Welcome, "the man with the melodeon plays about what he pleases, but my wife—she's the independent cuss! She plays from music."

* * * *

The other day I saw the first Japanese talkie ever shown in this country, "Kimiko." It's an odd hodge-podge, played by attractive young people who wear Occidental store clothes much of the time instead of their own graceful native garments. And the plot, for novelty's sake, is a domestic triangle! . . .

* * * *

The happiest women in New York are the nurses in the city's municipal hospitals. The law giving them a consecutive 8-hour work day has just been signed by our little Mayor LaGuardia. Until now they have been tragic slaves.

Remember how a year ago all the young glamour-girls were rushing around pestering all their friends for charms for their dingle-dangle bracelets? Half the fun was getting 'em, but now that's palled. So a local store has just put on a long charm-bracelet with no less than 60 of the bangles already attached. It is long enough to be worn twice around the neck, if you want to rattle and jangle higher up. Personally, I prefer sound-proofing.

Bob Burns Says

This seems to be the age of nervous breakdowns, but I don't think I'll ever suffer from that jest simply because I've made up my mind not to worry about anything until I get to it. Most people who have nervous breakdowns are the kind who can't sleep at night for thinkin' about all the work they have to do the next day.

I have one nervous uncle down home who won't last long if he don't start takin' things a little easier. Durin' harvest season he wakes his hired hands up and early Monday mornin' has breakfast at 4 o'clock, and he tells 'em, "Here it is Monday mornin'—tomorrow is Tuesday and the next day Wednesday—that's the whole week half gone and nothin' done yet."

White-haired, pleasant Mrs. Georgieanna Higgins recently was referred to as "the Betsy Ross of the Capital" . . . And this, because Mrs. Higgins sews on the country's flags . . . She doesn't make the flags, she mends them, and that's a full-time job, because flags continuously snap, tatter, in the Washington breeze . . . Her sewing-room quarters are in the labbyrinthine depths of the Capital and in the building she has sewn on flags for 20 years . . . Coupled to this is the duty of stamping "U. S. Senate" on new towels, repairing cigarette burns in carpets and placing curtains in the senatorial bookcases . . . The reference to her as "the Betsy Ross of the Capital" was made by a former service man who recently wrote here requesting one of the wornout flags . . . Although here 20 years, Mrs. Higgins refers to Newport, R. I., as "home."

One of the most delightful State society events of the season is anticipated for Friday evening when the New York State Society holds its long-prepared-for dance at the Shoreham Hotel . . . Dancing will be from 10 to 1 to Meyer Davis' music.

A good time seems ahead for Lieut. J. D. Craik, of the the Coast Guard—or is it a good time on a whaling vessel? . . . At all events, Craik sails from Sandfjord, Norway, aboard the Frango, the latter part of this month for a six or seven months' whaling cruise of the Indian Ocean . . . To the Frango, of the American Whaling Company, has gone the first whaling license given under the Whaling Treaty Act of May 1, 1936 . . . Six other licenses were issued for killer boats accompanying the Frango . . . Craik will be the inspector of the cruise.

The Farm Credit Club calls attention to its annual spring dance to be held Saturday evening at the Raleigh Hotel . . . And in a heavier vein, the Farm Credit Employes Bulletin calls attention to the matter of advance notice about the duplicating of work . . . Says the Bulletin:

"A number of operating offices have found it to their advantage to give notice to the chief clerk's office, well in advance, of unusually large pieces of duplicating work which they anticipate requesting . . . For example, one division some time ago gave notice of a particularly large production order three months in advance . . . As a result, the chief clerk's office tentatively scheduled this work for the time indicated and was thus able to allocate other work, as it currently came through, so that the facilities of the Duplicating Section were available for the work of the division that had given advance notice.

"This division secured delivery exactly on time of an extremely large quantity of material without impairing the service rendered to other requisitioning offices by the Duplicating Section. Advance notice on big jobs is in your own interest . . . Other divisions have helped to improve service by furnishing lists of items that are regularly ordered monthly, quarterly, etc.

"The chief clerk's office definitely plans, in advance, to hold time for such listed items and withold scheduling of other work in the Duplicating Section to protect this advance scheduling."

1,800 Children Attend Capital Cathedral Rites

More than 1,800 children enrolled in Episcopal Church schools in the Diocese of Washington marched into Washington Cathedral yesterday afternoon for a service of song and sermon led by their bishop, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman.

A choir of 350 boys and girls sang in the choir, the largest that has ever met in the cathedral.

The assembly in the great choir was also the largest that has attended a service there, and Bishop Freeman told the children he hoped the cathedral would soon be completed so there would be more room to accommodate future children's services.

The service is an annual affair in the diocese. Yesterday's was the first held in the cathedral.

Arrangements were made by the department of religious education of which the Rev. William R. Moody, rector of St. Mark's Church, is chairman.

Registration, National Board Meeting Scheduled This Morning.

Preparatory to opening their forty-second annual convention tomorrow morning, 300 members of the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, will arrive in Washington today and complete registration.

The organization's national board of management will be the first group to meet. It plans a conference at 10 a. m. today in the C. A. R. board room in Memorial Continental Hall.

This preliminary session will be followed by a "get-together" luncheon of national officers, State directors and senior presidents at noon in the Roosevetl Hotel.

Several score of members of the society who arrived in the city over the week-end spent Sunday sightseeing and participating in two religious services.

The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Church in Alexandria, preached a Sunday morning sermon for the C. A. R. delegates in his church, which for many years had been attended by George Washington. Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, president general, is a member of the parish.

Delegates to the convention will visit Christ Church again later in the week. The society will present the church with a baptismal ewer in honor of Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard, a member of the parish, who was the last member of the Washington family to be born in Mount Vernon, while the estate remained in the hands of the Washingtons.

Yesterday afternoon many of the convention arrivals joined in evensong services at Washington Cathedral. They heard a sermon by Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Cathedral staff.

In keeping with the traditions of the D. A. R. Congress the C. A. R. conventoin will open tomorrow morning with a procession of color bearers, officers and pages to martial music played by the United States Marine Band.

Mrs. Sinclair will call the convention to order, and the Rev. F. Bland Tucker, rector of St. John's Church in Georgetown, will deliver the invocation. Addresses of welcoe will be made by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Mrs. Howard, national vice president.

Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the delegates at a 3:30 p. m. White House reception. Tomorrow night the annual "stunts" will be staged.

Belasco Opens With Moot Film Of Infatuation

'Ecstasy' Returns to Site of American Premiere to Continue Run.

"Ecstasy," one of the most bitterly controversial films that have been released to Washington screens in recent years, returns to the Lafayette Square playhouse this week to resume the eight-week run it enjoyed on its first offering here.

Opening yesterday to cherry-blossom audiences, "Ecstasy" continued to exert the peculiar appeal of its subtle and, at times, obscure, symbolism. It was at first declared that this picture was so salicious that it could not be shown in the United States.

The first prints which Samuel Cummins, new lessee of the Belasco Theater, attempted to bring into the country were confiscated by the customs officials and burned on the dock. Mr. Cummins, thereupon, journeyed back to Europe, secured new prints and met with better luck on this side. He has been showing the film ever since to tremendous business, Washington having started the ball rolling with a typical "premiere" of the production in America.

There is, to be sure, a considerable amount of veiled suggestion in "Ecstasy." But it is a suggestiveness that is so cleverly camouflaged that only those who are in quest of something off-color, as the saying goes, ever will find it.

Basically, the story is tragic. A beautiful young woman, married to an elderly man, becomes infatuated with a handsome engineer, when her horse escapes her after a plunge in a sylvan brook. The young woman is completely nude and engages the entirely explicable interest of her "peeping Tom." On a tremendously stormy night, she visits his shack on the engineering project. Later, with some knowledge of what has transpired, her husband commits suicide in the ramshackle hotel in which she and her lover are stopping in a clandestine rendezvous. She leaves and the youth pictures in his mind's eye, what might have happened under different circumstances.

This brief outline of the tale, no doubt, seems a bit crass and flagrant. The unreeling of the picture gives no such blatant impression. It has never been quite comprehensible to this department why "Ecstasy" ever was banned in the first place, in view of the character of some of the other films that are given full right to be shown. One only detects in it what his mind seeks.

Something in defense of the film seems to be provided by the fact that it was judged to be the best of its year in Europe, where it was produced Czechoslovakia. Its principal actress is Hedy Keisler, wife of a millionaire munitions manufacturer, whose objections to her cutaneous display is said to have added to the pseudo-sensational history of the film.

"THE GOOD EARTH." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Pearl S. Buck, adapted to the screen by Talbot Jennings, Tess Slesinger and Claudine West, with musical score by Herbert Stothart, costarring Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, with Walter Connolly, Charles Grapewin, Tilly Losch, Jessie Ralph, Soo Yong, Keye Luke, Roland Lui, Suzanna Kim, Chingwah Lee, Harold Huber, Olaf Hytten, William Law and Mary Wong. Directed by Sidney Franklin. At the National Theater. Previewed Wednesday night, March 24.

Establishing itself as one of the marathon road-show attractions with which Washington screens have become acquainted, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Pearl S. Buck's novel of "The Good Earth" yesterday barged into its third week of impressive patronage at the National Theater.

There is every reason of superlative production, expert direction, splendid acting and incomparable photography to justify this three-week engagement on a reserved-seat basis. "The Good Earth" is one of the most profoundly able transcriptions of a sterling work of fiction to the screen that the cinema has known.

It has as its costellar players Paul Muni, as Wang Lung, the poor farmer who comes in time to riches and a vagrant disinclination to adhere to the rigid imposts of his marriage vows, and Luise Rainer, O-Lan, patient and long-suffering partner in his drudgeries. They are supported by a long cast of noted mimes, headed by Walter Connolly and Charles Grapewin, but with Jessie Ralph, Harold Huber, Tilly Losch and a considerable roster of others well up in the running.

There are photographic effects in this picture that seldom have been even remotely approximated before. The locust plague presents an amazingly realistic impression of what one of these sudden visitations must be like. This, however, is only one of "The Good Earth's" imposing scenes.

With virtually no lines to speak—only 78 in the entire length of the picture, I am given to believe—Luise Rainer offers a study in Spartan courage that stamps her performance as one of the gems of mimetic expression. Paul Muni, with a great deal more to say, acquits himself with equal favor.

This is a picture that is not to be missed by any who values the highest degree of integrity the films are able to muster. N. B. B.

Glen Echo.

Having thrown open its free gates to an estimated crowd of 10,000 eager customers on Saturday afternoon at 1, Glen Echo Park, Washington's nearby amusement center, perched high on the banks of the Potomac, yesterday enjoyed an even larger patronage—what with the spring temperature soaring to an unseasonable 93, and all.

All of the 50-odd amusement devices are in operation at Glen Echo, with the exception of the Crystal Pool, which will not be made available to the Capital's splashers and swimmers until May 27. Yesterday's thermometer would have justified the opening of this fine natatorium along with all the rest of the park's diversions.

On Saturday, the Spanish Garden Ballroom, where Dave McWilliams this season is conducting his own orchestra, was crowded. Yesterday, all of the operating devices got their full "play"—the Dodgem, Carrousel, Coaster Dip, Midway, Skeeball, "Run 'Em Yourself" motorboats and all the rest were packed afternoon and night.

If Glen Echo can keep going the way it has started, it will enjoy a record-breaking season—which is probably what Vice President and General Manager Leonard B. Schloss has in the back of his mind.

ALL of the enthusiastic West Coast reports of the superlative excellence of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Rudyard Kipling's story of "Captains Courageous"—it will be recalled that the Hollywood premiere of this exceptional subject was reviewed for The Post by Max Miller, author of "I Cover the Waterfront"—were borne out last Friday night when this picture was presented on the screen of the National Press Club Auditorium in compliment to the visiting members of the American Newspaper Editors Association and the membership of the National Press Club.

BELL.

The preview Washington showing of this film was made possible through the generosity of Carter Tate Barron, eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc.

Here is a motion picture production that matches "Mutiny on the Bounty" in the unfailing depth of its appeal. It packs a climacteric emotional wallop that seldom has been matched—if you can do with a bit of the vernacular of show business. Like "Mutiny," it consists for the major part of the open sea and ships. There is precious little feminine appeal in the whole thing—none whatever as a matter of fact—since there is no love story to be expounded.

There is, however, the story of a gold-plated kid who is washed overboard from a palatial liner and picked up by a fishing smack off the Grand Banks. This youngster, inured to all of the luxuries of a millionaire's household, learns about life from the rough fishermen with whom he is thrown in contact out where the Gloucester fisher-folk ply their trade—and a rough trade it is. The fundamentals of life gradually make their imprint upon a youthful consciousness that previously has been devoted only to the easy-going that great wealth can bring.

As I have already said, "Captains Courageous" is a picture that deals principally with mastheads and heavy seas, but it nevertheless plumbs those elementals of human living that lend it a dramatic fiber, a substance and a commanding dignity that place it among the major accomplishments of the cameras and microphones.

It is no part of these preliminary considerations to review this extraordinary film at this time in terms of personal performances, settings, direction, or any of the other factors that enter into a formal resume of the merits or demerits of any screen play. It may, perhaps, only now be said that "Captains Courageous," so far as I was able to discern from the sixth row—or was it the fifth?—possesses no demerits.

The cast is headed by Lionel Barrymore, as the understanding skipper who does not impose too great hardships upon the aristocratic youngster plopped into his schooner; Spencer Tracy, who does an incomparably fine piece of work as Manuel, the Portuguese fisherman who makes a man of the tot who has come into his charge; Melvyn Douglas, as the youngster's father, and John Carradine, as "Long Jack," as near a villain as the play can boast.

There are dramas that find their way to the silver sheet that have to rely upon artificialities for their effect. "Captains Courageous" is not one of these. It is content to make the most of clashes of viewpoint and a picturesque salt-water environment that compile a sum total of dramatic dynamite that has not been approximated since the same company's "Mutiny on the Bounty."

At the moment, I have no way of knowing precisely when "Captains Courageous" will be shown publicly on a local screen. I suspect that it will be some time in the future. It, nevertheless, is one of my firmest convictions that when this picture is released in Washington, whether as a road show or a regular attraction, you will want to see it as one of the outstanding examples of the cinema's ability to achieve complete realism.

In connection with "Captains Courageous," it is interesting to recall that Maj. Woody S. Van Dyke, ace director on the same lot, who is a current visitor in the National Capital, wired Victor Fleming, director of "Courageous," that he would be proud to have his name on the film as "assistant director." This, from the man who made "Trader Horn," "Eskimo," "The Thin Man," "After the Thin Man," "San Francisco," "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," and a list of other hits longer than you have been in town, was a real compliment to the man who made "Captains Courageous." There is so much to say about this Woody Van Dyke fellow that I am afraid it will take another paragraph.

To those who attended the afternoon performances at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday there was a surprise in the form of a personal appearance of Maj. Van Dyke as a part of the stage show. He was introduced by that gay wag, Fred Lightner, who made a very grand job of it, and proceeded then to relate interesting and amusing incidents that have attended his picture-making in Africa, Alaska, the South Seas and elsewhere—if you can think of an elsewhere. Mr. Van Dyke has an amiable stage presence, a clever gift of gab and, altogether, converts himself into a dandy "act."

Further than all that, Maj. Van Dyke has nicely engraved invitations out to a "Continental Buffet Recherche" at the Mayflower on Wednesday night, the 21st, at 8 o'clock. Perhaps not so recherche as some, we still will be there and are grateful for the opportunity.

One suspects that this is in reciprocation for a soiree that was tossed in Maj. Van Dyke's honor, and Nelson Eddy's, when they were here for the preview of "Naughty Marietta" at Loew's Capitol Theater.

But one never knows definitely about these social things.

The Variety Club of Washington suddenly has become conscious of its foremost obligation, under its charter from the "mother tent" in Pittsburgh, Pa. At a meeting of the Welfare Fund Committee in the clubrooms in the Willard on Friday night it was determined to make a definite drive in the direction of alleviation of suffering and affliction on the part of the underprivileged in and near Washington. The local Variety Tent includes the Baltimore, as well as the Washington area. The club has found it possible to pay off its entire indebtedness on the clubrooms—and that was a considerable sum—and has a nice nest-egg in the treasury. It now will proceed to go places and do things in the fulfillment of the idea on which it originally was predicated. More of this later.

Now that Ruth Draper, distinguished diseuse, has taken the week, the thing was futile at best, but, at least, we may be permitted to quote part of Ray Henderson's reply to our suggestion that Katharine Cornell bring her production of George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" here to the National the week of May 3.

Says Mr. Henderson: "I wish you could see Miss Cornell's 'Candida,' but having played Washington once this year she feels that she should devote the few weeks remaining of her season to Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, where she has not been seen this year."

So that is that.

Comedy Scores Hit.

The comedy relief is furnished by Jimmy Coughlin, Mac Dennison and Harry Reed, and while the funsters do have several really funny skits the laugh stock falls a trifle short of what it should be. Of the trio, Coughlin appears more effective in his efforts, while Harry Reed's impressions of stage and radio personalities are excellent in every detail. Herbie Barris and Chick Hunter give satisfactory performances in their straight-man characters, respectively.

Supporting the Countess Nadja in the feminine sector is Zorita, who is better known as the former Queen of the Nudist Colony at the late San Diego Exposition. Zorita, of course, does not appear exactly as she did there, but her brief appearances on the stage are welcome, though brief. Incidentally, her initial bow is unusual owing to the fact that a tame white pigeon is perched on her lovely head and appears quite at home while her mistress completes her dance specialty.

Others of the fair sex who contribute to the entertainment are Inez Graham, Elsa Ryon, Ann Smith and Billy Jo Holbert. Miss Graham renders several pleasing toe dance numbers, while Miss Holbert's bronze dance specialty is done in a manner that deserves much praise.

Gayety

"TEASES AND WHEEZES," an independent Burlesque Association attraction in 2 acts and 25 scenes, starring the Countess Narja, supported by Zorita, Inez Graham, Kitz Ryon, Ann Smith, June Rhodes, Billy Jo Holbert, Mac Dennison, Jimmy Coughlin, Chick Hunter, Eddie Yubel, Herbie Barris, Harry Reed, and Blaken and Harmon. Dance numbers produced by Paul Kane. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Larry Roberts.

One of the cleverest of all female artists in burlesque is making an appearance at the Gayety Theater this week. She is none other than the Countess Nadja, a Russian beauty, whose personality, we have on good authority, will grace the legitimate stage next season.

This fair lady is not exactly what we would call a strip artiste. True, the climax of her specialities may find Russia's contribution to the art of burlesque wearing little of her raiment, but the inimitable manner in which this is executed does more than justify her ability to perform such a number and making it still complete in its purpose.

Perhaps the most impressive appearance of Countess Nadja is in her "Dance of Desire." The subtle manner in which the number is presented gives much proof to the fact that the lady in question has dramatic ability and personality, important requisites that few of her contemporaries possess. Too, her songs and wardrobe are in keeping with the theme of the number.

Headlines Stage Bill at Earle

one of the most popular of the young singers on the airwaves and in projecting her songs across the footlights, who this week appears as headliner of the vaudeville portion of the entertainment at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Miss Froman comes back to Washington after several previous engagements.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, April 18.

Rarely a day joins history that I do not hear an actress remark, "I for one am going to quit at the top. No dying on the vine for me!"

CLARA BOW.

I have been hearing that old bromide for 20 years and equally as long I have watched the stars hang on either until the movies kicked them out or until they became too old and rheumatic to work. Culling my memory as I write this, I can count on the fingers of one hand the actresses who actually have retired at fame's crest. I had to go way back to find even five.

• • • •

Marguerite Clark is the shining example because she led the way. She was fandom's biggest moment when she waved the movies farewell. She has lived the life of a country gentlewoman ever since. Nita Naldi, whose exotic love-making used to sear the paint on cameras, stayed in Hollywood just long enough to pile up sufficient cash to stay out of Hollywood.

• • • •

Phyllis Haver, the bathing beauty who curved herself over the plate for a star-strike, went from filmdom to wifedom when her fan mail was 10,000 letters a month. And is it not strange that these three who retired and meant it should be such contrasting types? Miss Clark was a sweet girl, Miss Naldi a vamp, Miss Haver a comedienne.

• • • •

Now let's see; I have two fingers left to count on. Clara Bow gets the ring finger, because she changed from "It-girl" to cowgirl in one quick dismount and mount. Today she is enjoying life on her ranch, and to my knowledge has rejected movie offers totaling $250,000. Mary Pickford is claiming the fifth and last finger. She vows she will quit careers when she is Mrs. Buddy Rogers, and on this sayso she becomes the fifth retired star. Even at that, she barely makes the list before being counted out.

• • • •

A little old lady seated next chair in a theater last night turned to me and whispered, "Do you happen to know the name of the leading man? He has such a nice face?" I told her that he was Robert Young. "Oh," she cooed, "such a nice name too!"

• • • •

Private jirks: Katharine Hepburn's tantrums.

Actors who ask 4-year-old autograph seekers, "Who am I?" then refuse to sign when the embarrassed youngsters are frightened out of their memories.

• • • •

Small-fry producers who mix dummies with extras in grandstand sequences to save a few dollars (which come out pockets of extras who are thus cheated of jobs).

• • • •

Maj. Bowes's "amateurs."

Hog-rich stars who refuse to donate the customary half of 1 per cent to Motion Picture Relief. (Their noses should be rubbed in a few of their own dirty $1,000 bills.)

• • • •

Above mention of Maj. Bowes reminds me that I would like to get hold of his bell for just one evening. Know what I would do? I would hie me to one of those night clubs where the m.c.'s make a practice of calling upon second and third-rate singers to rise at their tables and sing (they always respond, probably because it is their only chance to get audiences). At the first off-key screech, I would slap the bell an awful wallop.

Contract Bridge

A Revealing Double.

An expert's reluctance to double slam contracts is based on the soundest type of reasoning. The potential gain is very slight compared to the risk that the double will point out a winning line of play. Today's hand is an example of a very bad double.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Double
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's bidding was, of course, very "fancy."

The fact that West did not open the Ace of clubs was proof that he himself became doubtful as to the value of his heart King—a doubt that should have entered the picture before he doubled.

The spade Jack was the opening lead. Declarer won in his own hand, and led a low heart toward dummy. When the Queen finesse held, the Ace was cashed, West's King ignominiously falling. Three rounds of diamonds followed, and then two more trumps, ending in the closed hand.

With five cards left, declarer's were the low spade, one trump and the K-9-5 of clubs. West's were the 10-9-8 of spades and the A-Q of clubs. Dummy held the A-K-6 of spades and the 4-3 of clubs. The last trump forced West to blank his club Ace in order to protect the spade suit. Dummy's spade was discarded, and declarer then led a low club from his King. West won, but could return nothing but a spade, which was won in dummy. Declarer's low club was discarded on the good spade, and the club King cashed for the twelfth trick.

Normal line of play (in the absence of a double) would have been to lead the ten of hearts from the closed hand in order to retain the lead, and later to have played East for the club Ace.

The squeeze play actually employed was based entirely on the information conveyed by West's foolish double.

FEATURE STORY: Saturday night Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt went to see "Red Harvest," the anti-war play concerning nurses . . . After the performance Mrs. Roosevelt went backstage to greet the cast assembled there. They all grouped around her while the venerable lady addressed them . . . "It's a play with a fine message," Mrs. Roosevelt concluded. "I enjoyed it very much. And I am sure you will have a long and prosperous run." . . . Five minutes later the cast went to their dressing rooms to collect their belongings—for "Red Harvest" had closed that night.

THEATER DEPT.: No play this season has received such a panning as was accorded "Bet Your Life," authored by Fritzi Block and Willie Howard . . . Howard read the reviews early the next morning and then retired . . . A few hours later Eugene Howard phoned. "How do you feel, Willie?" he asked. . . . "Oh, okay," Willie yawned. . . . "Did you read the notices?" Eugene inquired . . . "Yes, I read them," Willie sighed . . . "There's only one thing to do," Eugene suggested . . . "Yeah? What's that?" Willie asked eagerly . . . Eugene answered: "Ignore them!"

"Jack," said the informant, "I just discovered a movie theater which isn't playing any vaudeville, but isn't being picketed" . . . "Okay," Rosenberg replied, "I'll take care of that right away. I'll leave two pickets in your name!"

Miss Warren refused the job—until this week, when she came to New York with her mother. Joe Moss, of the Hollywood Restaurant, saw the young lady and asked her to join the new show at that cafe. Miss Warren and her mother came to the Hollywood last night to see whether the show is suitable enough for a Memphis Warren . . . Mrs. Warren saw the bared torsos and thigh-flinging and decided against it. A compromise, however, was effected, for, starting tonight, Alice Lucille Warren will be employed at the Hollywood—as a cigarette vendor!

LOCAL NEWS: Unless a leading film-developing company comes to terms this week, the I. A. T. S. E., the association of theatrical employes, will place that company on the unfair list. This means that many movies, for which this company has done the developing, will not be shown in America—because the motion-picture operators are associated with the I. A. T. S. E. . . . Lyn Murray, director of "The New Yorkers," has been assigned to assemble the chorus for the Texas & Pan-American Exposition . . . George S. Kaufman confides that he'll retaliate for Marc Connelly's producing "Having Wonderful Time," a play about non-Aryans. Kaufman promises, in return, to do a play about the Blarney Stone.

BUSINESS DEPT.: Will Morrissey, now an executive at Universal, still can't forget the con-spiels used when he was America's foremost cuff-producer . . . Morrissey summoned Art Arthur, the scenarist, to his home, and outlined a plot he had in mind. BEAUTY NOTES: Mrs. Cornelius Dresselhuys, the former Lorraine Manville, just arrived in England, on her honeymoon. She brought with her 30 gallons of "special American water" to use for washing her hair . . . Mrs. Dresselhuys, who is Tommy Manville's sister, didn't tell the reporters the complete story—of the Manville family's water obsession. Tommy himself refuses to drink from common spigots. His house is full of bottled-water jugs.

Rialto

There is another double-feature bill on view at the Rialto Theater this week. The principal offerings are "The 39 Steps," with Robert Donat and Madeleine Carrol in the principal roles, and Jessie Matthews, in "First Girl," as the secondary item.

It is a fine mystery story, with cross-moor hunts and whatnot to add zest to the occasion, that is presented in "The 39 Steps." In case this title is a little obscure to those who have not already seen the picture, it may be said that it represents the name of a secret society of anti-Government plotters, who are brought to heel in a service. No one will deny that Madeleine Carroll is a beautiful young girl. Donat seldom has done better work—not even in "The Ghost Moves West."

Miss Matthews, in this day and age, hardly needs any "build-up" as England's most adept exponent of the song-and-dance sort of thing. She combines abilities that are rarely encountered on the screen, or elsewhere. In "First a Girl" she is enabled to impersonate both a boy and girl—in something of the Vesta Tillie manner—and in so doing brings this frivolous bit of musical fol-de-rol out on top.

Little

At the Little Theater this week, beginning yesterday, to be exact about it, the major feature of the screen bill is a revival of that aging stalwart of screen plays, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," adapted from the stage play of the same name, in which Katharine Cornell appeared with such distinction on the stage, with Norma Shearer, Charles Laughton and Frederic March cast in the pivotal roles.

There is no need at this time to go into further rhapsodies concerning the manifold merits of this able translation to the screen of an admirable play. You will not like Charles Laughton in it any more than you admired his Capt. Bligh in "Mutiny on the Bounty," but it is a fine impersonation of a despicable character that he executes, nonetheless.

Mr. March, in this, is practically the perfect lover and Miss Shearer never better. Then there are Maureen O'Sullivan, the patient spaniel and many other members of the cast to lend the play the same impressiveness on the screen that it enjoyed on the stage.

Short-reels and news complete the program.

* X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1937 15

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

This department, and a lot of you guys, too, were probably swinging on the gate and partaking greedily of an all-day sucker when the greatest opening day in the pages of Washington baseball history was being enacted on the grounds now called Griffith Stadium.

This generation of fans will probably hold out for Walter Johnson's 15-inning 1-0 duel with Eddie Rommel in 1925 as the positively best opening-game performance in their time. Or they may, perhaps, be positive in the opinion that no more thrilling opening-game battle than Buck Newsom's 1-0 conquest of the Yankees last April, when Newsom, who was knocked cold by a thrown ball in the fifth inning, came back to shut the murderous Yankees out with one hit.

POVICH.

Taft Opened Season

A President of the United States was throwing out the first ball in the history of big league openers. President Taft, seated beside his aide, the late Col. Archie Butt, two years before that gentleman went down with the Titanic, a hero of the disaster, was giving his Presidential blessing to big league baseball.

* * * *

Fourteen thousand fans filled the rickety, single-decked stands. Connie Mack and his talented Athletics were providing the opposition. A brass band was gaily tooting "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," when it wasn't rendering those other smashing hits of the time, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" and that catchy ditty, "Every Little Bit, Added to What You've Got, Makes Just a Little Bit More."

* * * *

The derby was the badge of the sports of the day and the box-like caps of the old Athletics were the latest thing in baseball chapeaus. A few gay young blades in linen dusters and goggles puttered up to the stadium in the new-fangled horseless carriages and the wise-cracks of the times undoubtedly were "Oh, you Kid!" and "23-Skidoo!"

* * * *

Plank vs. Johnson

A tall, gangling kid with long, ape-like arms was standing out there on the pitching mound whizzing a little white baseball past the vaunted Philadelphia hitters. "Attaboy, Walt!" was the chorus of the grandstands. Washington fans for two years had marveled at this young fellow who came fresh from the Idaho sandlots to pitch for their team.

* * * *

Out there opposing Walter Johnson was the redoubtable Eddie Plank, who epitomized all that was great in a big league pitcher. It was the Johnson vs. Plank pitching duel fully as much as the spectacle of the Nation's Chief Executive at an opening game that filled the little park to overflowing.

* * * *

Inning by inning, Johnson and Plank found themselves locked in a brilliant pitching battle. A pair of two baggers by Jack Lelivelt helped to produce a 3-run lead for Washington. But as the game wore on, the interest shifted from the outcome of the game to the outcome of Walter Johnson's valiant bid for no-hit fame.

* * * *

Tough Luck, Walt!

Because for five innings the sluggers in the Philadelphia batting order had been unable to get a hit off Johnson. A half dozen he had turned back on strikeouts in that period and they could only beat his fast ball into the dirt or pop it high over the infield—when they managed to contact it at all.

* * * *

And then, apparently on the very threshold of a no-hit performance, Johnson was the recipient of a cruel break in the luck. Two were out in the seventh inning and the Athletes were still hitless when "Home Run" Baker lifted a high fly into rightfield.

* * * *

The 14,000 sighed their pleasure at the apparent disposal of Baker on that kind of an out and the preservation of Johnson's chances for a no-hit game. Rightfielder Gessler was galloping easily toward the descending ball and a simple catch when 14,000 gasps fell upon the scene.

* * * *

A small boy, running across the outfield to seek a better place of vantage, ran full tilt into Gessles, who was poised for the catch. Gessler was knocked off his feet, the ball descended safely, and Johnson's dream of a no-hit game vanished.

* * * *

healed sufficiently to permit him to play.

"Before anything positive can be known about Travis, I must await another examination of his wound tomorrow," said Martin. "There is a chance, though, that he may play."

But Harris, almost resigned, in his dismay, to the absence of Travis for the opener, repeated that the veteran Ossie Bluege would replace Travis at the shortstop position.

The Washington team that takes the field as the acknowledged outstanding "dark horse" of the American League pennant race will present two new faces in regular positions—the physiognomies of big Shanty Hogan behind the catcher's mask and Al Simmons in left field.

Thus Simmons, who brings a lifetime batting average of .345 to the clean-up position in the Nats' batting order, will be making his 1937 debut against the team with which he rose to stardom. The veteran Connie Mack, in placing his outfielders for Simmons' drives, will be attempting to circumvent the slugger whose prodigious batting feats helped Mack's team to three consecutive pennants in 1929-30-31.

At second base, Washington fans will see the familiar figure of Buddy Myer, his health regained, and promising superior protection for the Nats at his post. At third base will be the 1936 sensation, beardless Buddy Lewis, and rounding out the Nats' infield will be the veteran Bluege at shortstop and the talented Joe Kuhel at first base.

In right field, on the opposite side from which he performed last year, will be Johnny Stone, whose .341 average led the Nats at bat last year, and in center will be the fleet Ben Chapman, again leading off the batting order.

Connie Mack's young hopefuls, undismayed by their cellar position of last year, this season are buttressed by the presence of Bill Werber at third base. The flashy, but temperamental Werber who was plucked from the Washington sandlots by the Yankees ten years ago and has since served time also with the Boston Red Sox, adds both batting power and fielding finesse to the A's.

Pole Vaulter?

Is There One in the House? Theater Patrons Asked.

Patrons of a downtown threater were startled out of their dreamy calm the other day by an inquiry if there were any pole vaulters in the house. All but one were startled and he, Corrado Coffredi, of Catholic University, was panic-stricken when informed that a triangular meet between his school, Gallaudet and American University was well under way and officials were looking for him to do a little vaulting. So disturbed by this turn of affairs was he that his best effort measured only 10½ feet—not so good for a normal 12-footer.

Goffredi's troubles arose from the fact that he was uninformed of a change in starting time from 2:30 o'clock to 1 o'clock. It really wasn't his fault. But there will be no such mix-ups in the future, Coach Dorsey Griffith decided last night. Henceforth all athletes must remain on the campus the day of a meet until its conclusion.

Mason-Dixon Tennis Play Starts Today

Greenbrier to Sponsor Event Despite Club's Resignation.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 18.—Young tennis players seeking their first national recognition and stars of the college courts will open play tomorrow in the seventeenth annual Mason-Dixon Tournament.

Led by the veteran Gilbert Hall, winner of the North-South crown at Pinehurst, the entry list includes Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., ranked No. 10 in the national standings, and Walter Senior, of California, No. 12 on the national list.

Robert B. Parker, secretary of the sponsoring Greenbrier Club, indicated the club's differences with the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association would not delay play in the event.

Davis Cup aspirants whose presence usually mark the Mason-Dixon are on the West Coast for the cup match with Japan. Other entrants will include Marcelle Painville, Canadian Davis Cup player, and the full teams of North Carolina and Duke Universities.

Manager Bucky Harris (right) pats Pitcher Joe Cascarella on the back as Joe tells his boss that he'll be out there to win the opener with the A's this afternoon.

Cliff Spencer's Par 72 Paces Local Golfers

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Cliff Spencer, long-hitting Beaver Dam professional, carved out a par 72 yesterday, despite five 3-putt greens, and paired with Martin McCarthy to defeat a pair of visiting pros, Leo Walper and Mel Shorey, on the final green.

Spencer partially offset his faulty putting with four birdies, two on each nine, and enabled his team to post a best ball of 67 over the Landover layout, 2 better than the professional duo. Walper, driving range instructor, posted the next best score with a 73, followed by Shorey with 76 and McCarthy with 77.

C. Williams led the Beaver Dam competitors in the Maryland State Golf Association handicap week play with an 81—7-74. Williams led both in low gross and low net.

Pro-Amateur Is Slated At Indian Spring Today

George Diffenbaugh, association president and host, expects a field of more than 50 for the first Middle Atlantic pro-amateur of the season at Indian Spring today. Part of the field will play in the morning, and the rest the usual 1 p. m. starting time.

Baltimore and Virginia mentors are expected to swell the field, which includes Cliff Spencer, Roland Mackenzie, Gene Larkin, Diffenbaugh, Walter Cunningham and other local members.

Six Indian Spring members tied for first place in the Blind Bogey event yesterday with a net 79. H. B. Schwarthout, 97-18—79. H. M. Comer, 91-12—79; H. S. Stine, 99-20—79; Arthur McArdle, 96-17—79; William Howell, 99-20—79, and Lloyd Kilhaen with 109-30—79 were the prize winners.

George Beyer, 88-15—73 won the draw for the handicap event at the Manor Club yesterday. J. L. Maddox with 97-17—80, won second prize with Ray W. Coontz, 100-22—78 taking third. Harry Pitt and Bobby Brownell, shot 74s and with scratch handicaps tied for fourth place. D. N. Pratt, 81-7—74, and Mr. Taylor with 80-6—74, were the other fourth place winners.

Aided by four birdies Dave Thomson played the Washington Golf course in 71 yesterday, 1 over par, and paired with Dr. McClendrous to have a match with Jimmy Corcoran and Rudolph T. Harrell. The Scott pro and Corcoran halved the second hole in birdie 2s, the latter holing a 40-foot putt.

Allen and Olmsted Lead Argyle Golfers

Wilton T. Allen won the draw for first prize in the Kicker's Handicap Tournament at Argyle yesterday with 88-18—70. Tied for second place were E. S. Cassedy, 86-16—70; W. H. Flannery, 89-19—70, and C. R. Dettweiler, 85-15—70. Tied for third were R. E. Gable with 96-21—76, and C. M. Randall with 93-12—76.

Jock Olmsted, club champion, played the first four holes of the Silver Spring layout in 4 under par. He birdied the first, parred the second, holed an approach shot for an eagle on the third and rammed in a 10-footer for a birdie on the fourth. Trouble on the finishing holes ran his score to 36. E. S. Cassedy also holed an approach shot for an eagle on the fifth hole, after nearly driving the green.

Public link coursese were thronged with capacity crowds yesterday, Annacostia reporting one of the best days in several years. Harry Graham signed up more than 50 entries for the public links tournament next week at East Potomac, while Rock Creek golfers prepared to move into their remodeled clubhouse. It will be ready early this week.

Wayne Sabin Whips Grant Straight Sets

Atlanta, April 15 (AP).—Young Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., whipped Bryan (Bitsy) Grant in the finals of the Atlanta invitational tennis tournament today in straight sets, 6—0, 6—0, 7—5.

Bouncing back from a defeat yesterday at the hands of Gilbert Hall, South Orange veterans, at Pinehurst, N. C., the youngster trimmed Grant decisively in the play-off of the tournament, which was postponed two weeks ago because of rain.

Sabin is ranked seventeenth nationally and Grant No. 3. En route to the title contest with Bitsy, Sabin eliminated a fellow Californian, Bobby Riggs.

The Hollywood netster lost to Hall, 7—5, 6—4, 8—6, in finals of the North-South tournament at Pinehurst yesterday. Hall succeeded Don Budge as champion.

Addison Beats Iroquois.

Addison Chevrolet routed the Iroquis A. C. nine yesterday, 11 to 3, collecting 16 hits, while Michelson was holding the Indians to five. The pitcher also collected three hits in three trips to the plate, with Catcher Barr getting three out of four.

Nat Homers Rout Orioles, By 15 to 9

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., April 18.—In their last unofficial appearance before the firing begins in the American League pennant race tomorrow, the Nats tapered off with a strenuous nine-round batting session against the Baltimore Orioles today. Incidentally, they won the ball game, 15 to 9.

They jolted the Orioles' pitching for 15 large dimension hits and jarred 8,000 Baltimore fans right out of some premature joy, occasioned in the second inning, when the Orioles pounced on Dick Lanahan for six runs and gained an 8-2 lead over the big leaguers.

Joe Kuhel—Jarring Joe he was today—was present and accounted for to the great grief of both Baltimore pitchers and Baltimore fans. He accounted for four of the Washington runs by the simple process of hitting three home runs, one of 'em with a man on base.

The greatest cheer of the afternoon resounded in the fourth inning, when Kuhel struck out, after pounding a pair of pitches over the rightfield wall in the first and third innings. Kuhel atoned for his fourth-inning lapse in the seventh with the most prodigious of his trinity of homers—a colossal sock onto the rooftops beyond the street in rightfield.

The guy who was pitching to Kuhel and the rest of the Nats was a righthander of doubtful talents named Bill Lohrman.

The Nats were dealing in only two quantities today—ones and fours. They scored single runs in each of the first two innings and came up with clusters of four in the third, sixth and seventh. They tapered off with a lone run in the eighth—Johnny Stone's home run over the leftfield wall.

Stone himself was a fair country hitter today, although Kuhel gained the chief honors. The Nats' rightfielder bashed out a homer, a triple and a double to center in his four times at bat.

Three walks, a wild pitch and a grievous error by Ossie Bluege figured in the half dozen runs the Orioles scored off Lanahan, who allowed only two hits during the inning, one of which happened to be Puccinelli's home run with a pair of colleagues on base.

$30,000 Bid One Offer He Refused

Outfielder Shunted by Indians Reports in N. Y. Today.

New York, April 18 (AP).—The New York Yankees announced today they had signed Tom Henrich, rookie outfielder, who was declared a free agent last week by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

The Yanks refused to discuss the financial arrangements of the deal. It was known, however, that Henrich, ruled a free agent after a hearing involving the Cleveland Indians, had received offers from eight major league clubs, one of them for $30,000 to put his name to a contract.

The Yankees' announcement said he will report to the club in New York tomorrow and that the transaction bringing him to the world champions was completed by Scout Johnny Nee at Henrich's home town of Massilon, Ohio.

Most Promising.

Henrich has been rated by many observers as one of the most promising outfield rookies in the minors, worth $15,000 to any major league club.

Shunted around in the minors, he appealed to Commissioner Landis to investigate his status. He charged the Indians sent him from farm to farm, thereby preventing his advancement to the major leagues. He batted .346 with New Orleans last season, and this year had been shifted to Milwaukee of the American Association.

In ruling Henrich a free agent last Wednesday, Commissioner Landis said his investigation disclosed the Indians were guilty of "covering up" Henrich to block his entry into the big leagues through the selective draft.

Cleveland Directed Shift.

The commissioner also said Henrich's transfer from New Orleans to Milwaukee was made at the direction of Cleveland officials. Henrich had played with Zanesville, Ohio, and New Orleans, both Cleveland farms.

He was purchased by Milwaukee last fall with Pitcher Ralph Winegarner for $7,500. Landis nullified this deal, insofar as it concerned Henrich, by notifying Milwaukee officials that the young fly-chaser could not play for the Milwaukee club under the terms of his ruling.

Penn, Drake Relays Color Sports Week

Thousands Compete in Annual Classics, Imperil Records.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—The two big relay carnivals, Pennsylvania and Drake, again will vie for the title of the biggest and best outdoor track show this week, while the headline writers dust off such stock phrases as "relays draw 3,000 athletes" and "records smashed at carnival."

Already there have been some record smashing preliminaries in the Texas relays two weeks ago and the Kansas relays yesterday, but the chances still are that the big shows Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia and Des Moines will hold their places as the producers of the finest performances of the spring.

There won't be as much chance to draw a comparative line between the performance of Eastern and Western stars this year, for the Drake carnival has drawn a bigger entry list from Eastern colleges than ever before, while teams from Southern and mid-Western track powers and one, Occidental, from the Pacific Coast are due to compete at Penn.

The East managed to take only three of the university relay titles at the 1936 Penn carnival as Texas, Ohio State and Michigan each won two of the big events. This year, however, Michigan won't be present, as the Wolverines performed on the Pacific Coast yesterday in impressive style, whipping Southern California, 81½ to 49½, as they took first place in 11 of 14 events.

The Texas and Ohio relay teams also are missing from the program, although the Buckeyes will be represented individually by Dave Albritton, co-holder of the world high jump records. Some of the Eastern strength also will be diverted to the newly organized New England relays at Harvard Stadium.

Americans Beat Shamrocks

New York, April 18 (AP).—The New York Americans defeated the St. Louis Shamrocks, 4 to 2, at Starlight Park today, to win the National Challenge Soccer Cup, 4 goals to 3.

Helen Jacobs Upset By Mme. Mathieu

Athens, April 18 (AP).—Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, defeated Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., Wimbledon champion and generally regarded as the world's No. 1 woman tennis player, in straight sets in the final of the Eastern Mediterranean Tennis Tournament today. The scores were 9—7, 6—0.

The Frenchwoman teamed with Adeline M. Yorke, of England, to defeat Miss Jacobs and Marie Louise Horn, of Germany, 6—2, 6—2, in the women's doubles final.

Chesapeake Due to Test Derby and Preakness Candidates

Fairy Hill, Matey Seek Rich Purse

War Admiral, Others to Clash; 30,000 May Watch Struggle.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 18.—Lacking the historic background and ballyhoo of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, but assured of a smart field, the Chesapeake Stakes, feature of this week at the "Graw," promises the outstanding action of the Maryland spring season. Always considered one of the major trials for the two big classics, the Chesapeake this year may rival the main shows.

With the mile-and-a-sixteenth test six days away, nine formidable 3-year-olds are considered probable starters in the $10,000 added stake. Many questions regarding the ability of these stars are likely to be answered. Those who have been studying the past performances of the Glen Riddle Farm's War Admiral, Foxcatcher Farm's Fairy Hill and Walter M. Jeffords' Matey will have something concrete to work on before sunset next Saturday.

Select Group.

These three will match strides in a group likely to include the Glen Riddle Farm's Over the Top, Myrtle Shea's Merry Maker, Mrs. Louise Viau's Rex Flag, Bomar Stable's Siam, Townsend B. Martin's Court Scandal and A. G. Vanderbilt's Tedious.

Can War Admiral go a distance? He won a sprint in excellent time last week and worked out to a mile impressively. Will Matey return to his Pimlico Futurity form? The Jeffords colt has been working well. Was Fairy Hill's victory in the Santa Anita Derby a flash in the pan? The colt shipped here in excellent condition. Is Merry Maker to be the surprise 3-year-old of the year? Trainer Shea maintains he will. Will Townsend B. Martin's luck fail him? He purchased Court Scandal just before the colt won the Flamingo at Hialeah. Can Tedious run up to the expectations of A. G. Vanderbilt? Many say he was poorly ridden when defeated here last week.

Fans Puzzled.

These and many other angles that have been bothering the turf fans will be brought into the open with the running of the Chesapeake.

Then there will be the question of seeing the race. Yesterday Havre de Grace drew a crowd of 25,000. That is an estimated figure, but 17,400 programs were sold. This gathering came despite the fact that Jamaica was having its first week-end program and that a hunt race was an attraction not many miles away.

TURF NOTES—Matey turned in a fast workout yesterday, being clocked in 1:57 2-5 for a mile and an eighth. . . . Hubert LeBlanc became a full-fledged jockey at the conclusion of yesterday's program . . . and henceforth will not get the 5-pound apprentice allowance . . . he gained prominence at Laurel last fall and broke his arm during a workout late in that meeting . . . He came back to ride sensationally in Florida . . and has turned in 66 victories this year . . . There is a report that Pompoon lost a shoe in the stake at Jamaica last week . . If the colt lost a shoe and then won in 1:11 without getting hurt, it looks like they should change his name to "Shoeless Joe Pompoon." . . . Fervid, popular mare with Maryland bettors, has been retired and will be bred to Canter . . . How to Mount a Horse and What to Do When You Get Up

(This is the second in a series of riding lessons. Mr. Kleemann, a graduate of the equitation school at Biefeld, Westphalia, Germany, has ridden and trained jumpers and dressage horses for many years. He is an acknowledged master of the subject who at present is connected with the Arlington Hall School for Girls.

BY FRITZ C. KLEEMANN,
As told to Bill McCormick.

The first step in riding is learning to get on a horse without steps, a friendly boost or a block and tackle. Proper mounting eliminates the danger of waking up in the emergency ward of your favorite hospital.

Of course, a rider always mounts from the left side. Horses are trained to be climbed aboard from the port side and any variation in this procedure tends to upset the animal. And who are we to upset animals?

The reins are held in the left hand, which is placed on the mount's neck. The left foot is inserted rather deeply into the left stirrup and the right hand grasps the pommel, or front, of the saddle. There is only one way to assume this position, without standing on your head, and that is facing the rear of, or better, across the horse, which is proper.

One stands on the ball of the right foot, flexes the right knee and springs into the saddle like a movie hero vaulting onto his fiery steed to gallop to his fair maiden's rescue. It is just as simple as that. This form of mounting not only eliminates danger, but it does away with much tugging, pulling and grunting, which is disconcerting to man and mount and highly amusing to spectators.

Mounting from behind or by any one of the numerous hit-and-miss systems that only inexperienced leather-pullers can conceive is dangerous, because, should the mount bolt, the mounter would have no more chance than Mussolini making a public speech in Madrid. If a horse bolts while being mounted incorrectly, the odds are six, two and even the rider will be unable to kick loose from the stirrup and will be dragged. Thus with proper mounting we do away with the first of the "big dangers of riding" which frighten the timid.

Once on a horse, the pupil begins to learn a bit about horse nature. Remember, always, that no horse, unless he be an outlaw who has no more place in the world than a Dillinger, wants to harm man. Anything dangerous he does is done simply because he does not understand what is wanted by his lord and master, or lady and mistress. A study of equine psychology is as important as a study of the proper seat and handling of reins.

It has been my experience that women, in one sense, make far better equestrians than men. The ladies are more sympathetic, more understanding, and consequently reach more perfect accord with horses than do men. Women, however, are not physically as well adapted to hard riding as are men.

The seat is the very foundation of good riding. There is nothing complicated or involved about the proper seat. As United States Cavalry instructors say, it is "dependent upon balance, supplemented by suppleness and muscular control." As in all other sports, relaxation is an important essential.

First the stirrups must be adjusted to the proper length. There are many trick ways of doing this, but, at the outset, it should be done by measuring with the legs of the rider. When the legs are allowed to dangle, the stirrups should be just long enough to hit at the ankle, or slightly below it. The shape of the rider's leg and the girth of a horse may make a difference, but for general purposes this is the proper length.

The foot is inserted in the stirrup so that pressure is on the ball. The heel is then shoved down and the toes are thrown slightly out. This gives contact between the rider's calf and the horse, which is very useful. Particularly in time of trouble, when the rider needs all the contact he can get.

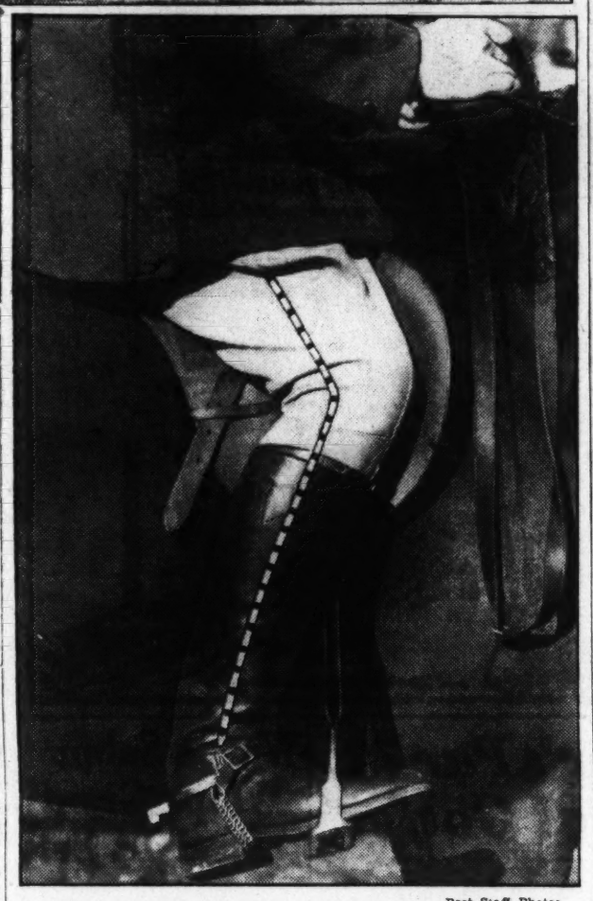
The shoved-down heel lengthens the line of the leg from the hip down, allowing some of the motion of the mount to be absorbed in backward and forward motion and tending to eliminate bouncing. The stirrup straps should be perpendicular.

Some authorities advocate crowding the pommel, or sitting as far forward in the saddle as possible. Personally, I prefer a seat taken squarely in the middle of the saddle. This seems more sensible. It is easier to be poised while seated comfortably in the middle of a chair than while balanced on the edge.

The shoulder, hip and knee should be in a fairly straight line. This does not mean the rider should be rigid. Far from it. He should be now—and at all times, relaxed, but alert.

The elbows should be held loose and close to, but not against, the body. The arms are held waist-high and the hands about 3 or 4 inches above the horse's withers.

The hands, and handling of the reins, play such an important part in good riding that we will deal with them in tomorrow's chapter.



Post Staff Photos.

Gov. Eccles Will Open Bank Loop

Federal Reserve Chairman Starts Sandlot Season Tomorrow.

The Bankers League officially opens Washington's sandlot baseball season tomorrow, with Marriner Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, tossing out the first ball. National Savings & Trust will play National Metropolitan in the curtain-raiser.

Four other teams are in the fight for the championship, namely Riggs National, American Security, W. B. Hibbs and Hamilton National.

Several high-ranking Government officials and a radio broadcast will mark the opening of the U. S. Government Baseball League, Saturday, on the Ellipse. Federal Bureau of Investigation's city champions will play the District Commissioners after an elaborate ceremony at 2:15 p. m.

The U. S. Marine Band and the Police Boys Club Band will march in a pre-game parade, led by Maj. Harvey L. Miller of the U. S. Fleet Marine Reserves. Bleachers for 3,000 spectators will be erected by the National Capital Parks.

The play-by-play account will be broadcast by WMAL's Billy Coyle and Jim McGrath. Trophies offered by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation; Clyde Tolson, assistant director, and Fred Buchholtz, Occidental Hotel proprietor, will be awarded the league champions at the season's finish.

With 18 clubs—its largest membership in years—ready for action, the National City Baseball League has completed its schedule-making and will open the season a week from next Sunday.

President Vic Gauzza reports three new teams in Section A, namely, Gordon's Cafeteria, Anacostia Motor Co. and Mount Rainier Grays. The Woodmen of the World will play under the colors of Rose's Liquor Store with a stronger lineup than last season.

Such stars as Eddie Cinnoti, Joe Pusitari, Karl and Fred Nau and Stumpy Talburtt, of last year's Blue Flames; Ray Clark, first baseman and leading hitter for Miller Furniture, and Jacob Matlack, ace pitcher of PWA, have joined forces with the Liquor larrupers.

The opening day's schedule for Section A calls for Shady Grove meeting the Union Printers, Gordon's Cafeteria playing Anacostia Motor Co., Rose's Luiquor Store vs. Dixie Pigs, and Heurich Brewers vs. Mount Rainier Grays.

In Section B, the 260th Coast Artillery faces Ross Jewelers, Read's Pharmacy meets Star Radio Co., New Deal Men's Shop confronts the Cardinals, Georgetown A. C. meets H. B. Leary, and D. C. Plumbers face District Grocery Stores.

Gallagher Faces Big Obstacle in McDonald

Large Martin Gallagher, the perennial puncher from Foggy Bottom, has resurrected himself again and will make passes in the general direction of Sandy McDonald, a gentleman of imposing bulk from Texas, at Turner's Arena tonight.

Marty wrapped himself in moth balls immediately after he had holes punched in him by Buck Everett last summer. Now that the outdoor season is again almost upon us, Gallagher desires to re-establish his tremendous popularity in the hope that he can draw another record gate once the lads start tossing leather in the wide open spaces of Griffith Stadium.

A shot at Max Baer looms for Gallagher if he can get by McDonald. When first mentioned, there seemed little chance that the former heavyweight champion would fight here. A local newspaper has thrown its support behind such a contest, which would be a benefit performance, and with that substantial backing it now appears probable that Baer may accept a match with Gallagher. Such a bout is generally estimated to draw between $35,000 and $40,000.

Large Martin may encounter a stumbling block too large to be overcome in the person of McDonald. The Dallas heavyweight is a combination boxer-puncher and while men of his size usually are easy for Gallagher, Sandy's speed and skill may make him far from an easy opponent.

McDonald's dynamite lies in his left, with which he jabs like an oversized Tommy Loughran and hooks like an equally big Jack Dempsey. His right-hand wallop is not to be sneezed at, but because he has such perfect control of his portside flipper, he does not often have to resort to his right.

Unlike most large boxers, McDonald moves around with great rapidity. Marty always has been able to lick the big ones—if they stood still. What he will be able to do against a big fellow who moves is another question.

Gallagher will report in probably the best condition of his entire fighting career, which is just as well. He expects to weigh just a few pounds more than 200, which will put him at his best fighting poundage. Because his most effective work is done at close quarters, Gallagher does not suffer bad effects from long layoffs.

Ring idleness will seriously affect timing on long punches, but as Gallagher does not throw many from long range, his timing will be little affected. Not only that, but every time Gallagher goes into a long period of idleness he returns to the squared circle filled with renewed energy and strength.

Just by way of complicating predictions on the outcome of tonight's bout, authentic word comes from New York that McDonald is in his finest fighting fettle—the same condition that enabled him to stop George Paveleo, Al Demodowitz, Babe Daniels, Paul Hoft, Bobby Brown and many others. Besides his string of knockouts, McDonald boasts decision victories over Babe Hunt, Johnny Erjavec, Jack McCarthy and many others.

Post Predictions.

MAIN EVENT—Marty Gallagher, Washington, vs. Sandy McDonald, Dallas, Tex., heavyweights; 10 rounds. Rated C. Those who think McDonald will prove a push-over for Martin are in for a nice surprise. Perhaps Martin himself will be the most surprised person in the place. Just on general priciples and largely because Gallagher is in good condition, we pick the Foggy Bottom heavyweight to defeat McDonald, but it is just about a toss-up.

SEMIFINAL—Vincent Serica, New York, vs. Al Lowman, Baltimore, middleweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Serica has scored five successive knockouts. He shouldn't break his streak here.

PRELIMINARIES—Mike O'Leary, Baltimore, vs. Ole Anderson, Leonardtown, Md., lightweights; 4 rounds. Rated C. The boys dislike each other so much they even fight in the dressing rooms. This is the rubber and we favor Anderson.

City Duckpin Event Opens Tomorrow

One of the largest fields ever assembled for the annual city duckpin bowling tournament will seek prizes totaling approximately $3,200 in the annual championship meet opening tomorrow night at the Lucky Strike mapleways. Team entries have established a new record of 388, an increase of almost 20 per cent over last year, while 358 doubles combinations and 617 singles have been received.

Strongest bid for the team crown is expected to come from suburban districts which have supplied more than one-third of the entries. Galt Davis, of Rosslyn, has 51 of the 132 teams from outlying precincts; Earl Stocking, of Silver Spring, 33; Hugh Crawley, Mount Rainier, 19; Charley Carl, Takoma, 16, and Henry and Oscar Hiser, Bethesda and Hyattsville, 13. Convention Hall has 87 entries, again leading all local drives.

A new idea in duckpin competition will be tried in Baltimore at the Recreation Alleys under Sid Friedberg's direction. It is a champion of champions, head-to-head elimination tournament for both women and men. The host alley is giving the use of its pinways free, and kicking in with $50 added for the men's purse, and $25 for the women's purse. Entry fees are $5 for men and $2.50 for the ladies.

Ray Barnes, Ed Blakeney, Astor Clarke, Ollie Pacini, Howard Parsons, Hokie Smith, Perce Wolfe and Joe Harrison, local stars who won stake events during the past season, are scheduled to compete. Lorraine Gulli is entered in the women's division. Stake winners only are eligible.

The District League race ends this week with Occidental needing only one game to clinch the pennant. Bill Krause, who will pair with Astor Clark in the tournament doubles, is expected to hang up a new season average mark, barring a terrific letdown. He is carrying a 125-24 average at this writing. Team standings:

Georgetown A. C. Wins.

The Georgetown A. C. of the National City League's section B trounced the Prince Georges A. A., 21 to 4, yesterday, with Whitt and Shaw allowing six hits.

With Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: Selections at Havre de Grace.

Having an extra day over the week-end to work on the figure books, I arose at sunrise yesterday to see Clocker Mike in action at the track. He had set the alarm clock for 4:45 and he had gone when my conscience wouldn't let me sleep any longer. When I was walking up the lawn, I saw the usual group of clockers, but not Mike. I began to wonder if Mike could find a slot machine so early in the morning. I said a good morning to the fellows and asked of Mike's whereabouts. Somebody pointed to the eighth pole and there was Mike leaning up against the pole. Two horses were breezing through the stretch. I dodged them and went into the infield. There's a real clocker for you. Old Mike, he likes to get close to his work. Mike right down on the track where he can't miss anything. As I approached, Mike appeared to be looking at his watch, but he did not turn his head to observe the horses at the finish. I soon found why. Mike was leaning against the pole sound asleep. I shook him. Mike awoke with a start and clicked his watch to stop it. "How fast did that inside horse work?" I asked. Mike fumbled the watch and said, that was a pretty good work, boss." I took the watch out of his hand and read it—6 minutes and 18½ seconds. I said, "Come on, Mike, I'll buy you another ride on this merry-go-round and you try real hard to get the brass ring this time." BILL.

First race—Local Boy and Low Cuts should battle it out for the chief award in this field of maiden juveniles. The former, from the Vanderbilt Stable, ran a creditable race here last week and I believe he received enough education to be ready for a winning effort. Low Cuts also turned in a nice last. Unless there is a sleeper among the first-time starters, I look for Frank Brooke to be third.

Second race—Looks as though we will have to take Acautaw and a short price in this field. The bad-legged veteran has a class edge on this cheap field. Square Play, a fair one at Bowie, should be second. Wandrel wants more distance, but is a threat.

Third race—Lady Maryland, away from the races for some time, has worked well for this effort, and with some energetic handling I look for her to score. Sweet Desire, of the Bomar entry, and Care For, recent winner, to take care of the others.

Fourth race—As Bob Burns would say, it looks like you got me here, folks. I'd like to pass up this group of cattle, but the boss wants three horses, so I'll take Felwyn, Flying Dere and Goldspray.

Fifth race—Bootless should race the Bradley colors to victory in this race. Obviously needed that last. Genie Palatine, out once since taking a rest, will be the one to beat. Brown Twig for the show.

Sixth race—Infilee prefers an off track. However, the company is so cheap that I can't take anything else. Swiftlet has beaten better than these. Copper Tube probably will get in the money despite the high weight.

Seventh race—Idle Along and Battling Girl are teamed here and both have worked well. Snobby Scamp needed that last and may lead Braving Danger to the wire.

Best bet—Acautaw.

Baseball Outranks Football As Favorite Spectator Sport

But Youths Now Prefer Grid Sport

Basketball, Boxing and Horse-Racing Rank Next.

By Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, April 18.—Old King Baseball recevied a vote of confidence from democratic subjects all over the country today as the American Institute of Public Opinion announced results of a Nation-wide popularity poll among the sports.

In spite of his advanced age—baseball will be 98 this year according to the records—and despite rumors of his decline, King Baseball is still first in the hearts of his countrymen, the poll reveals.

The institute asked representative voters in each State:

THE VOTE OF MEN.

	Per Cent Preferring To Watch
1. Baseball	44%
2. Football	28
3. Basketball	7
4. Boxing	5
5. Horse-racing	4
All others	12

THE VOTE OF WOMEN

	Per Cent Preferring To Watch
1. Baseball	27%
2. Football	23
3. Basketball	15
4. Tennis	9
5. Horse-racing	8
All others	18

This is the first time the institute has conducted a sports poll, and it is therefore not easy to compare today's vote with past sentiment.

Many observers believe that sports popularity moves in cycles, depending sometimes on the appearance of the occasional superstar who captures public imagination. They point to Babe Ruth in baseball, to Big Bill Tilden in tennis, and later to Helen Wills, as examples of stars who increased the popularity of their respective sports.

In the future the institute expects to measure popularity trends among the leading sports, much as it now measures the trend of opinion on political and social issues.

After several hard depression seasons professional baseball is enjoying bright horizons again, but today's institute poll uncovers evidence which may mean that baseball is losing to football in the affections of young Americans.

As age increases, however, the popularity of baseball jumps and that of football shades off. Above the age of 35, Americans give baseball twice as many votes as football. Above 45, baseball is mentioned more often than a score of other sports named in the institute poll together.

Obviously baseball still holds the loyalty of the fans who remember the Cobbs, Wagners, Matthewsons and Waddels in baseball's hall of fame. It is another story with the younger generation.

Notice how today's vote varies age levels:

	Per Cent Preferring to Watch
	Base-ball	Foot-ball	All Others
Age 17-20	23	44	33
Age 21-24	33	39	28
Age 25-34	36	35	29
Age 35-44	49	24	27
Above 55	58	14	28

In spite of the fact that basketball probably had an attendance twice as great as did football last year, the vote for basketball is not exceptionally high. Women give the game a larger number of their votes than men do, however, and it has strong support in the Middle West and East particularly.

Other sports among the first ten in today's poll are hockey, wrestling, tennis, golf and swimming in that order.

New Women Swimming Stars Stir Enthusiasm for Future

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 18.—A new front of young stars has moved in to replace all but vanished old guard of American women's swimming.

The annual A. A. U. indoor championship meet which ended yesterday at the Lake Shore A. C., failed to produce anything startling in the way of time performances, but Miss Charlotte Epstein, of New York, who should know, saw enough to stir enthusiasm for the future. An unusual number of newcomers of about even ability were the reasons.

Miss Epstein, chairman of the National A. A. U. women's swimming committee, who has been watching champions come and go for how many years is nobody's business but her own, thinks the new crop may even regain world supremacy from the Dutch, Danish, Japanese and Czechoslovakian stars who dominate the international field.

The blonde Virginia Hopkins surged to her first indoor title in the 220-yard freestyle. Doris Brennan rallied from a disappointing start in the meet to whip Miss Rawls in the 500-yard freestyle, in 6:24.7 Miss Tomska missed two titles by a grand total of about 3 inches.

Dorothy Forbes of Philadelphia, took over the backstroke title relinquished by Eleanor Holm Jarrett, in the fair time of 1:12.1, and Arlite Smith took the low-board diving crown from her Lake Shore clubmate, Marian Mansfield.

Miss Rawls, an oldtimer at 19, retained her 100-yard breaststroke and 300-yard individual medley titles, the former in meet record time of 1:18.5. Miss Eckert's successful title defense in the 100 yards also was accomplished in meet record time, 1:01.8.

Majorie Gestring of Los Angeles, Olympic high board diving champion, easily won her second indoor championship, scoring 144.36 points to 131.23 for Miss Eckert.

Draper May Get Post With Harvard

Evans Upsets McNeil In Pigeon Shooting

Lonaconing, Md., April 18.—A crowd estimated at 4,000 saw John W. Evans defeat the veteran Leo (Toad) McNeil, of Klondyke, at a live pigeon shooting match at Athletic Park, yesterday afternoon. The score was 16 to 15. John Ralston, this city, and Patrick J. O'Brien, Midland, were judges.

It was a see-saw until both shooters settled down and killed nine straight. Then McNeil missed the last three out of four. Evans continued to kill the next four, making a total of 13 straight. Both shot at 21 birds. The edge had been conceded to McNeil on account of his experience.

Arkansas College Prefers Classes; Curtails Sports

Conway, Ark., April 18 (AP).—Arkansas intercollegiate sports has lost another round with the professors.

Hendrix College here has announced termination of contests with Arkansas State Teachers College "because of the difficulty of making intercollegiate sport fit into Hendrix's new educational program."

It was the third major State college within less than two years to "de-emphasize" intercollegiate athletics because of its interference with scholastic activity.

Bees, Phillies Play Two Games Today

Boston, April 18 (AP).—The Boston Bees and Phillies, already doomed to the second division by the experts, will swing into their initial action a day ahead of the rest of their National League rivals tomorrow in morning and afternoon games.

This opener will probably set the league's 1937 attendance low, for the Bees' management expects only a handful of spectators out for the early half of the Patriots' Day double bill. The afternoon crowd, however, will probably threaten the park's capacity of 45,000.

Manager Bill McKechnie has nominated Veteran Danny MacFayden as the pitcher to open the campaign and Jimmy Wilson, the Phillies' pilot, will depend upon right-hander Bucky Walters, once an infielder for both of the Boston major league clubs. Jim Turner, the most impressive of the Bees' promising pitching rookies, will be on the mound against the Phillies' ace southpaw rookie, Wayne Lamaster, during the afternoon contest.

Large Field In Boston's Marathon

Kelley Choice Over 210 in Historic Run Today.

By the United Press.

Boston, April 18.—Arlington's "thin man," John Adelbert Kelley, ruled a topheavy favorite tonight to pace a star-studden swarm of American and Canadian distance runners to the finish line tomorrow in the forty-first annual Boston A. A. marathon.

A field of 211 was scheduled to toe the mark at noon for the heart-breaking 26-mile, 385-yard grind from Hopkinton to Exeter street in Boston's Back Bay. Upward of half a million spectators will line the course to watch this Patriots' Day test of speed and endurance—the classic among American marathons.

Winner of the 1935 race and only American to finish in the 1936 Olympic Marathon, Kelley not only was the choice to win, but was conceded a good chance of bettering the course record of 2:31:01.6, established by Les Pawson, of Pawtucket, R. I., in 1933.

The 29-year-old unemployed "flying florist" will be pitted against a pack of plodders that rates as one of the best in the history of the classic. Seven previous winners are entered.

Besides Kelley and Pawson, there are Clarence de Mar, seven-time winner and ace of them all; Defending Champion Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, of Bradford, R. I.; Dave Komonen, of Sudbury, Ont., 1934 winner; Paul Debruyn, of New York, 1932 winner, and Bricklayer Bill Kennedy, of East Port Chester, Conn., who triumphed in 1917 and who will be running the one-hundredth and possibly last marathon race of his career.

Mel Porter Threat.

Pawson and Mel Porter, of Newark, N. J., along with Walter Young, of Canada, loomed as Kelley's chief threats. Word also was out to watch De Mar who is gunning for third place, while Anthony Paskell, of West Lynn, and Girard Cote, of Canada, were standouts among the "unknowns." Pat Dengis, of Baltimore, also was expected to finish among the leaders.

Meanwhile, the feeling persisted that Brown, though he underwent a serious operation during the winter and has only 12 days of training under his belt, may surprise by finishing high.

Only a month ago, Kelley served notice that he was in rare form by bettering his own record in winning the 20-mile North Medford run. In last year's B. A. A. run, Kelley was a disappointing fifth—the result of a case of jitters brought on by the realization that this was an Olympic tryout race. Freed of this mental hazard, Kelley was expected to run one of the greatest races of his career tomorrow.

On the Air Today

To several millions of Americans today nothing will be more important than the opening of the baseball season. Perhaps you can go year in and year out without missing the click of a ball on a slugger's bat but you really should come down town some afternoon and see the "other half," gathered around sidewalk loud speakers in stores. They're probably listening to Arch McDonald relaying the account of an out-of-town game. He does that, you know, all season.

But for today, the three major networks will broadcast each detail of the opening game of the season which is being played right here in Washington at Griffith stadium, with the President of the United States, following custom, tossing out the first ball.

Tom Manning will be on hand for N. B. C. Ted Husing handles the assignment for Columbia and Washington's own Tony Wakeman, with the assistance of baseball's "Big Train," Walter Johnson, gets the call for Mutual. Manning and Husing are among the best known of radio's many names. Wakeman is the newcomer, although he has had a sports following on the air for many years before coming here. You hear him each afternoon from WOL in his "sports page of the air."

* * * *

In keeping with the season, the "Radio Theater" presents "Alibi Ike" tonight, WJSV, at 9, with Joe E. Brown in the role of the rookie pitcher who, despite amazing performances on the diamond, always gives excuses for not doing better. It's a Ring Lardner story. Brown, as you must know, was once a professional baseball player (St. Paul and New York Yankees) and played the same role in the motion picture version of the story. Roscoe Karns, one of my favorite comedy performers, and Rochelle Hudson are in support. In the intermission. Babe and Mrs. Ruth will be picked up from their New York apartment in a little 'fireside chat" on the general subject of "play ball again."

Jews Will Map Drive for Funds

Every Jewish organization in Washington has been invited to send representatives to the first meeting of the campaign committee of the United Jewish Appeal tonight at the Jewish Community Center.

Plans for launching the two weeks drive for $80,000 will be discussed by the drive chairmen, Morris Simon, Isidore Hershfield and Morris Cafritz, and other leaders of the campaign.

The women's division will hold its first meeting tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Leopold V. Freudberg, 3512 Albemarle street northwest. Co-chairmen of the women's division include Mrs. Freudberg, Mrs. Fedora J. Lewis, Mrs. Sidney Hechinger and Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz.

Funds raised in the two weeks' drive will be devoted to finding a place of refuge in Palestine for destitute Jews of Eastern and central Europe. The United Jewish Appeal represents the participation of Washington Jewry in two national campaigns, the $4,650,000 drive of the joint distribution committee and the $4,500,000 United Palestine Appeal.

Self-Government Seen Aid to Relief

Self-government in the District would mean improvement of the local relief situation, according to William H. Savin, director of the Family Service Association, speaking at a meeting Saturday of the Women's City Club.

Savin pointed out a citizens mass meeting April 4 was necessary to attempt to break the "log jam" over relief appropriations. "What we need to do," he concluded, "is to insist as a community that some kind of a guarantee be given that all the people shall have their minimum subsistence needs met."

The other speaker was Miss Emily Kneu Buhl, chief of the utilization section of the Rural Electrification Service, who described the program and aims of the REA. At the close of the meeting, members voted to urge the Commissioners to seek a deficiency appropriation for $100,000 a month for the rest of the fiscal year, and another appropriation of at least $1,000,000 for the Board of Public Welfare.

Jesse Jones to Start Nation's Tallest Shaft

Houston April 18 (AP).—Jesse H. Jones Houston finnacier and chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will lay the cornerstone Wednesday for the Nation's tallest shaft the $1,150,000 memorial at the San Jacinto battleground.

The ceremony will be on the 101st anniversary of the decisive battle of the Texas revolution. The completed shaft will tower 564 feet, several feet taller than the Washington Monument.

Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, Presidential candidate in 1936 on the Prohibition Party ticket, has been elected president, without salary, of Trustees of the International Reform Federation.

The group met Friday at 134 B street northeast. Dr. Colvin succeeds the Rev. William Sheafe Chase, rector honorarius of Christ P. E. Church, Brooklyn, whose salary will be continued until the end of the year.

Dr. Chase was honorary canon and special preacher at the Cathedral in Garden City from 1902 until 1905, and rector of Christ Church for more than 26 years. Gold Strike Starts Rush to Alaska Bay

Bethel, Alaska, April 18 (AP).—Little tent cities today dotted the shores of Kuskokwim Bay where stampeders flocked by airplanes to search for fortunes in placer gold and platinum.

The platinum rush centered on Goodnews Bay, where deposits were found on a narrow strip of beach, White Eek River and Togiak Bay drew the gold hunters. The magic words—"new strikes"—brought veteran miners and green hands to the tent towns.

Food was short. Men roamed the beaches or struck back into the hills in search of pay dirt. The stampede got its start with word of rich strikes around Goodnews and Kuskokwim bays. Some old timers reported later no important new discoveries had been made and questioned whether the stampede was justified.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 18.—While steel production continues at a high level, new buying is in lighter volume. In spite of smaller inquiry mills have not made much headway in reducing backlogs and continue to restrict bookings to average needs of the buyer. Meanwhile an opoprtunity is afforded to clarify the situation and put books in better order, says Steel.

Adjustment of steel and iron scrap prices is proceeding in orderly fashion, Steel's composite receding last week to $21, a drop of 60 cents from the preceding week, the second downward step. This makes the composite practically the same as for the second week of March.

Only slight changes in operating rates at various centers have been made, the net result not affecting the national rate of production, which remains at 91½ per cent. Cleveland increased 2½ points, to 76½ per cent, Buffalo 2 points to 90 and New England 2 points, to 97 per cent. Cincinnati lost four points, to 88 per cent and Youngstown 1 point, to 86 per cent. No changes were made in the rate at Pittsburgh at 95, Chicago at 84, Eastern Pennsylvania at 59½, Wheeling at 96, Birmingham at 80, Detroit at 100 and St. Louis at 82.

Announcement of prices on finished steel for third quarter is being sought by consumers, but steelmakers are not ready to commit themselves so far ahead, especially with so many uncertain factors existing. At the same time an increasing tonnage is being booked for that delivery at prices prevailing at shipment. This factor may cause third quarter announcements earlier than is usual, perhaps in May.

Foreign consumers of pig iron continue to look to this country for additional tonnage and total export inquiry is estimated conservatively at 125,000 tons. Two inquiries for foundry grades call for 70,000 and 40,000 tons and there are smaller lots of other grades. Producers find it difficult to meet delivery requirements of this business, as much tonnage is desired within a few weeks.

Settlement of the Chrysler strike and partial resumption of production brought a gain in automobile output to 124,970 units last week, 15,765 more than the preceding week. General Motors accounted for 52,155, Ford for 34,850 and Chrysler for 22,200.

Shipments of finished steel by the Steel Corporation in March reached 1,414,399 tons, the largest March tonnage since 1929. For first quarter Corporation shipments were 70 per cent heavier than for the corresponding period of 1936. Declines in scrap caused the iron and steel composite to lose 8 cents, moving from $40.55 to $40.47. The finished steel comopsite is unchanged at $61.70.

Stockholders Approve Hupp's New Plans

Richmond, Va., April 18 (AP).—The recapitalization plan of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, propsed by the board of directors as a means of financing "adequate production," was approved here yesterday at a special stockholders meeting of the corporation.

More than two-thirds of the outstanding capital stock was voted in favor of reducing the $10 per value common stock to $1 per share and the sale of 988,971 shares of the new stock. This plan would provide approximately $2,600,000 in new capital.

The plan will become effective on completion of pending proceedings before the Securities and Exchange Commission and other regulatory bodies, Eppa Hunton 4th, counsel for the corporation, said.

With the total authorized capital stock remaining at 2,000,000 shares the value of the old stock, under the plan, is reduced to one-half share of the new $1 stock. At the time the plan was approved today there were oustanding 1,318,628 shares, and 193,463 shares in the treasury of the corporation.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Recover in Week

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Trade News Supports Stocks but Dollar Nervousness Is Unsettling.

New York, April 18.—Speculative markets last week were satisfactory to nobody. Stocks relapsed into a state of dullness generally associated with mid-summer, and price movements were indecisive. On balance some ground was gained, but not enough to settle the question of the next broad movement—either completely to discourage the bulls or to give much material comfort to the bears.

Moreover, the strength came mostly at the beginning of the week, when on the surface portions of the news were favorable, and the later weakness suggested that part of the early recovery had not been due to any fundamental improvement in the position.

Government bonds hardened until near the close of the week when the statistics on gold imports, and reported uneasiness abroad over a possible change in the gold price, in spite of official denials by our own and the British treasury, sprang up and offset the huge addition to excess reserves occasioned by Federal Reserve bank and Treasury purchases of Government bonds. In bond circles the feeling grew that, with the situation somewhat clearer on Government policy, insurance companies and banks would reenter the market. Last week the Federal Reserve banks added $28,000,000 to their purchases and in March, the Treasury announced, it supported the market to the extent of $105,000,000, but by Friday the official support was found to be no longer necessary.

Boom and Spending.

Aside from technical conditions in the markets, the tendency to await developments was understandable, for this week a special message from the President to Congress is expected on relief appropriation. That matter is crucial at this time when, by his own statement, the President feels that business is not only prosperous but that, on the durable goods side, the pace is becoming too swift. Although some good economists feel that the apprehension over an inflationary boom, so far as business activity is concerned, is somewhat premature and that business needs further encouragement, to go on with a Federal deficit, partly on account of unemployment, would seem inconsistent on the part of the Administration.

If the Administration really does feel that business now needs a touch of the brakes instead of a stimulus provided by Government purchases of durable goods, now is a good time for a showdown on the matter of relief. Unemployment most certainly would increase with any slowing down in the heavy industries, for the depression never did cast down the quick consumption industries greatly. Assuming that industry is doing about as much as, with the increased efficiency of production and the drain on public purchasing power that inevitably has accompanied the huge absorption of money into Government spending channels, it is able to do, the time is ripe for a drastic cut in relief spending and other Government distribution of funds.

Such a reduction may not be soon probable, but something must be done, and soon, toward balancing the budget, or inflation will be impossible to stop. New taxes are now being discussed in Congress, notwithstanding portests by House and Senate leaders that no need for them exists, a view echoing that of the President. What among other things is needed is a frank survey of employment and adoption of a definite and consistent policy on spending. What we now have is active business side by side with an enormous non-working pay roll, and a tight and a cheap money policy pulling at either end of the cart.

Industry Goes Ahead.

Decision last Monday by the Supreme Court that the Wagner labor act was constitutional was received with mixed feelings. The immediate response of the market was favorable, possibly because of the hope that the so-called liberal view of the court might lessen the chances for packing that branch of the Government and because of the supposition that, with relationship of labor unions to corporations nearer clarification, the strike menace might recede. Those considerations were far from bringing on a broad buying movement in stocks, and the subsequent publication of a wide list of corporation earnings reports and estimates for first quarter, showing uniform increases running to as high as 50 per cent over a year ago, had more bullish significance.

Most of the weekly trade news was favorable. The steel industry picked up further, rising above 90 per cent of operating capacity. Railroad car loadings last week, while falling under the previous week, were far in excess of a year ago. Cotton consumption in March turned out to have been the greatest in the history of American industry.

5-Day Week Started By Banks in Paris

Paris, April 18 (AP).—Paris banks inaugurated a five-day banking week today with large signs on bank doors informing customers that all departments would be closed every Saturday. No unofficial exchange operations were carried on because of the new closing policy.

The five-day week resulted from the new 40-hour week law. The banks were obliged to close either Saturday and Sunday or Sunday and Monday and chose the former two days.

New SEC Rule Sets General 55% Margin

Partners and Members Put on Same Basis as Public.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—The New York Stock Exchange moved today to further govern trading activities of members, in accordance with recommendations made by the Securities and Exchange Commissoin.

In new rules, effective May 17, the exchange places members and partners in member firms on the same footing with the general trading public as to margin requirements.

They require members, when trading for their own accounts, to maintain at all times margin of 55 per cent in the form of cash or collateral of the market value of the securities they are carrying with their own firms or with other member firms.

The new rules are the culmination of a long inquiry conducted by the SEC into member trading. In suggesting them, the commission held excessive trading by members for their own account tended to widen the market's fluctuations.

Under the old system it was possible for members in so-called "daylight" trading to buy and sell many lots of stock in course of a single session, with but nominal marginal coverage, so long as accounts were evened up at the close.

Lumber Shipments Decrease in Week

The lumber industry during the week ended April 10 stood at 71 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 74 per cent of 1929 shipments.

New orders, though slightly below those reported for the preceding week, were higher than in any other preceding week of 1937. Production was slightly above the preceding week; shipments, slightly below.

National production reported for the week ended April 10 by about the same number of mills was 3 per cent above the output of the preceding week; shipments were 3 per cent less than shipments of that week and new orders were 4 per cent under that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Chain Store Sales Up 22.6% in Year

New York, April 18 (AP).—According to a compilation made by Merrill, Lynch & Co., 28 chain store companies, including 2 mail order houses, reported an increase in sales of 22.6 per cent for March, 1937, over March, 1936. Excluding the 2 mail order companies, the 26 other companies reported an increase in sales of 20.5 per cent.

Sales of these 28 companies showed a 16.57 per cent increase for the three months of 1937 over the comparable 1936 period. Excluding the 2 mail order companies, the 26 chains reported an increase of 13.85 per cent.

Abrupt Decline InCommodities Gives Warning

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—Whether by coincidence or otherwise, an uproar of selling in grains, metals, rubber and other key staples of world trade echoed last week warning hints from Washington and London against the sweeping early spring rise in prices, lifting many back to 1929 levels. The break has washed out most of the new year gains in leading speculative staples.

As some Wall Street observers see it, the immediate significance of the setback is that it apparently relieves business and Federal authorities, at least for the nearby future, of fears of a runaway advance.

At the rate the movement was going in March, many were apprehensive business and Government costs would be thrown out of line and sreiously threaten lasting recovery and Administration attempts to balance the budget.

With a moderation of the pace, it was held, the possibility Washington might resort to drastic measures, like lowering the buying price for gold, has diminished. Industry, moreover, is expected to find the breathing spell welcome while it presses on with plans for expanding capacity and production to meet heavy orders tossed on its counters the last six months.

Roosevelt Message.

Looking back. Wall Street now sees the early spring boom in commodity markets topped off as President Roosevelt spoke out in a press conference against prices of steel and copper and announced a shift in Federal spending away from durable goods.

In commodity circles, this was interpreted generally as a warning against rising prices all around. Observers noted the Presidential comment came after basic staples, on the average, had rcovered to about pre-depression prices, the avowed goal of the New Deal "reflation" campaign.

At the same time, London began to draw purse strings on borrowed money going into speculation. In light of the ensuing decline in prices, tightening of credit accommodations in London seems to have been especially effective. Wall Street had credited London with leadership of the world-wide advance in prices since last autumn, rivaling wartime in the scope and rapidity of the rise.

Putting two and two together, many in the financial district saw concerted action or desire in Washington and London to apply brakes to the "inflation" swing, which was threatening to add to the cost of England's defense and the United States' relief and recovery program. However, the collapse of the speculative drive in grains, metals, rubber and cotton evoked various explanations in financial quarters.

B. & O. Showing Of New Train Set for Today

A new streamliner, which the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is introducing as an "improved" Royal Blue train, will pull into the Union Station this morning for a day of public inspection.

The eight-coach train will offer passengers many new conveniences when it goes into service on the New York-Washington run next Sunday, company officials said yesterday.

Seats throughout the train are of the reclining type. In three of the four coaches there are roomy lounges and smoking rooms. The dining car has both a conventional table compartment, and a tavern. The chair car will provide seats with a reclining feature, and a large drawing room with chaise lounge. The observation car will be richly furnished with lounges and occasional chairs.

Rubber insulation of the six-wheel trucks will make for smooth and quiet riding, the engineers point out. Efficient couplers between cars will eliminate slack.

The streamliner, taking the name of the Royal Blue already in service, will operate on the same schedule, leaving New York in the morning, for early afternoon arrival in Washington, and starting the return run from Washington at 3:45 p. m.

Richardson to Speak.

William E. Richardson will be the Columbia Historical Society's speaker at its meeting Wednesday night in the Mayflower Hotel. He will address members and friends on "The Friends' I Street Meeting House and Its Colonial Background." Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Sanderson will furnish the musical entertainment.

Goodwill Tour Planned By Count von Luckner

Stettin, Germany, April 18 (AP).—Count Felix von Luckner, who, as commander of the famous commerce raider Seeadler, was one of Germany's World War heroes, sailed today on another goodwill tour in command of the 200-ton schooner Seeteufel (Sea Devil).

The tour is planned to cover two years and more than 16,000 miles.

Lye Victim's Throat Was Opened by Swallowing Steel Beads.

itself was rather simple. Seldom do patients fail to survive it. This was to be the last step in a year of work which had been more hazardous to the life of the youngster.

In 35 minutes the operation was finished, the child was wheeled to his bed, doctors removed their rubber gloves and nurses sterilized instruments. Everyone hoped for the best.

In the dawning hours of yesterday the little boy's temperature began to rise. As the heat flushed his body, nurses became alarmed, telephoned Dr. Flynn, told him what was happening. At 6:30 a. m., Bobby was dead.

"The throat was perfectly cured," said Dr. Flynn yesterday. "Patients invariably get well from such a simple operation. I can hardly bring myself to believe that the child is dead. He was contented and happy and there was nothing important wrong, although he was quite weak and restless for the past several weeks. The operation was too much for him."

It was learned that Bobby had been taken back and forth to the hospital many times during the convalescence period in which he was expected to improve. But being such a young child, and with his stomach brought up from the anterior toward the abdominal wall, and frequently requiring synthetic foods such as glucose, the shock of the operation was too much for him.

After living a year on "borrowed time" and apparently recovering from a series of dangerous injuries and operations, he died within reach of complete recovery.
